

Senators Push Amendment Without Waiting for White House

WASHINGTON (AP) — Four Senate sponsors of a proposal to curb U.S. activities in Cambodia have taken the initiative—without waiting for White House agreement—to broaden support and improve chances for a quick vote.

The proposed changes introduced late Thursday leave intact the substantive parts of the Cooper-Church amendment that would bar funds for "retaining" U.S. forces in Cambodia.

But they make clear the cutoff would only take effect after the June 30 date set by President Nixon for withdrawal of U.S. forces.

It also, they said, would be in concert with the declared objectives of the President of the United States to avoid the involvement of the United States in Cambodia after July 1, 1970.

The move was seen as an effort to force the White House, which has been considering various Cooper-Church modifications, to either accept or reject the move by the amendment's sponsors.

Although Sens. John Sherman Cooper, R-Ky., and Sen. Frank Church, D-Idaho, expressed hope the change might pick up another half-dozen votes—they already claim 53—the White House holds the key to whether outspoken Republican opponents drop their intention of delaying any votes until after June 30.

The four sponsors of the measure are Cooper, Church, Sen. Mike Mansfield, D-Mont., and Sen. George D. Aiken, R-Vt. Mansfield is Senate majority leader.

As debate continued Thursday, Sen. Albert Gore, D-Tenn., charged President Nixon had told a group of veterans and retired officer group leaders of U.S. plans to attack Communist sanctuaries in Cambodia two days before he announced it to the nation and congressional leaders.

At the same time, the Tennessee Democrat added, the information "was being withheld from the Senate by no less a personage" than Secretary of State William P. Rogers.

Gore's attack was based on a letter dated May 13 in which retired Adm. W. R. Smedberg III, president of the Retired Officers Association, told its members of the meeting with Nixon.

At the White House, press secretary Ronald L. Ziegler said Nixon mentioned the situation in Cambodia at the April 28 session with leaders of several patriotic groups.

While Nixon did not say he was sending troops into Cambodia, Ziegler said, it would be easy to make assumptions subsequently that he was referring to the attack announced on April 30.

Smedberg confirmed Ziegler's analysis.

"At the time we were briefed, the President told us why he had made this decision," Smed-berg said at his home in Crystal River, Fla., "but we did not know what it was—simply that he had made a very difficult decision and he hoped we would back him when we found out what it was."

Gore, however, said, "This letter, if correct, indicates that the decision was being discussed with sundry private citizens while the information with respect to it was being withheld from the Senate by no less a personage than the secretary of state himself. This is a shocking situation."

In the letter, Smedberg appealed for support for Nixon's "difficult and courageous decision" and revealed "President Nixon told me and a few other officers of veterans and patriotic organizations, two days before his talk to the nation, that the action he was soon to order was imperative if we were to escape the probability of total and humiliating defeat in Vietnam."

S. Viets Set No Deadline

SAIGON (AP) — The South Vietnamese military command said today that its forces will stay in Cambodia "as long as necessary" to destroy Vietnamese Communist forces and their sanctuaries and remove their threat to South Vietnam.

The announcement came in response to a question whether South Vietnamese troops would pull out of Cambodia by June 30, the deadline set by President Nixon for American troops to pull back to South Vietnam.

A spokesman for the South Vietnamese command recalled earlier statements by President Nguyen Van Thieu and Vice President Nguyen Cao Ky that South Vietnamese troops would stay in Cambodia as long as necessary to complete their mission and that they had the ability to stay there alone.

The spokesman did not indicate whether this mission includes aiding the Cambodian government in its fight against the North Vietnamese and Viet Cong. But Ky said during a visit May 12 to Neak Luong, Cambodia: "The future depends on a common plan with the Cambodians. If they really need our help we will stay here. We will stay until they feel they have the strength to fight the Viet Cong and the North Vietnamese by themselves. Only then will we go."

The announcement today clashed with predictions of some White House officials last weekend that South Vietnamese troops would withdraw from Cambodia around June 30. But debate was continuing within the Nixon administration over whether the Saigon regime should be pressured to pull back.

Ambassador Ellsworth Bunker met for 80 minutes today with President Thieu. Spokesmen would not say what was discussed, but The New York Times reported from Washington that the Nixon administration had instructed Bunker and Gen. Creighton W. Abrams, commander of U.S. forces in Vietnam, to work out a joint policy of troop withdrawal with Thieu's government.

The South Vietnamese military command also disclosed that it now has 40,000 regular troops operating in Cambodia, the largest number it has acknowledged. They include elements from eight of South Viet-

Social Security Increase In a House-Passed Bill

WASHINGTON (AP) — Legislation to boost early and long-range increases in Social Security benefits—and taxes—has passed the House as a special Senate committee called for a major reform of the system to avoid sentencing retired persons to a twilight life of poverty.

The House-passed bill calls for a 5 per cent increase in benefits in 1971 with a provision for future increases geared to the cost of living.

The bill was sent to the Senate where considerable sentiment exists for further increases, a feeling bolstered by the annual report released today by the Special Senate Committee on Aging.

The committee said despite recent hikes in Social Security benefits about 7 million of the 20 million Americans age 65 or over live in or near poverty.

The report recommended a substantial boost in the minimum individual payment, now $64 a month, and further across-the-board increases

Claim Atom Threat Is Lost on Peking

WASHINGTON (AP) — Two ranking Pentagon officials say nuclear retaliation is not a reliable deterrent against a Red Chinese attack because there is no way to know how much atomic destruction Peking is willing to accept in return.

Chinese citizens are being told "they can accept an attack, survive it and grow," the officials said in congressional testimony released today, and U.S. retaliation against 1,000 Chinese cities would kill only 11 per cent of the country's population.

The April 10 testimony by Deputy Defense Secretary David M. Packard and Dr. John S. Foster, director of defense research, came on behalf of the Nixon administration's Safeguard antimissile system.

They said it would be foolhardy to rely on the U.S. nuclear deterrent when the Safeguard system can stop any missile attack Communist China can launch against this country this decade.

They told the House defense appropriations subcommittee U.S. retaliation against 200 Chinese cities would destroy up to 90 per cent of that country's industrial capacity while killing about 9 per cent of its population.

It is impossible to assess whether Chinese leaders, who have "traditionally placed a rather low value on human life," would not accept that, Packard said.

Packard and Foster provided the subcommittee a 30-minute Chinese-made color film described in the transcript as showing "Chinese preparations for the nuclear tests held to observe effects on their troops and ground equipment."

"The striking feature of this film—at least to us," Foster said, "is the attitude that it seems to be describing to the people in China—that they can accept an attack, survive it, and grow."

"It is similar to some of the early notions in this country when we first had atomic bombs," he said. "I found it very disquieting."

Urging no Safeguard construction delays, Packard and Foster repeated the assessment that even present schedules would not have the system built in time to counter the earliest possible Red Chinese nuclear threat.

The House passed the bill for a 5 per cent 1971 benefit increase Thursday after surprising the sponsors by tacking on provision for future increases geared to the cost of living.

An unusual combine of Republicans and liberal Democrats rolled up a 233 to 144 vote for the long-range increases—which also involve continuing increases in the payroll tax.

There is considerable sentiment in the Senate for further increases in benefits and also for tighter controls over the soaring cost of government-aided health programs like Medicare and Medicaid.

In this department the House voted standards on doctors' fees, encouragement for use of outpatient rather than institutional services, a beginning of controls over hospital charges and an option allowing elderly persons to enroll in comprehensive health care plans with government help.

Sextuplets Born, But All Die

NEW YORK (AP) — A 25-year-old woman who had been taking a fertility drug gave birth to sextuplets Thursday night, but all of the infants died within seven hours.

A spokesman at University Hospital said the infants, five girls and a boy, were born three months premature and weighed less than a pound each.

The mother, Mrs. Martin Danoff, wife of a Manhattan attorney, was reported in good condition. A hospital spokesman said both she and her husband were sad but "philosophical" at the loss of the babies.

The hospital said the infants were born at two-minute intervals, the first at 6:07 p.m. The boy and three of the girls died within two hours, and a fourth girl died about four hours after birth.

The remaining infant, rushed to Bellevue Hospital shortly before midnight for intensive care at a premature infant ward, died at 1:04 a.m. today.

Herbert Kadison, spokesman at University Hospital, said Mrs. Danoff's doctor had expected multiple births, but had anticipated no more than triplets. The Danoffs have a son, who is 3.

He said the fertility drug she had used, known as Clomide, was not regarded as encouraging multiple births.

The last major multiple birth in New York occurred Feb. 24, when quintuplets—three girls and two boys—were born to Mrs. William Kienast of Liberty Corners, N.J. All five are still alive.

There have been only 20 sets of sextuplets reported born in the world since 1900, the last in December of 1969 to a 23-year-old London housewife.

Ambush Israeli Bus; Children Are Killed

TEL AVIV (AP) — Arab guerrillas ambushed a school bus today, killing 10 Israelis, at least five of them children, and wounding 21.

Jerusalem protested to the U.N. Security Council about the attack, which occurred near Israel's border with Lebanon. It did not ask for a meeting.

The Arabs fired bazookas and small arms about 15 feet from the bus as it headed towards a border school.

The wounded children, many of whom lost limbs, were flown to hospitals.

Israeli planes and ground troops raided Egypt's major naval base on the Red Sea during the night.

Aboard the ambushed bus, bloodstained satchels and lunchbags were strewn over the seats.

At least five of the dead were aged 6 to 8. Two teachers and the driver also perished. The driver was thrown 25 feet from the bus.

An Israeli soldier searching the area after the incident stepped on a mine and was wounded.

Two packs of Jordanian cigarettes were found next to four bazooka shells which had not been fired. Footprints indicated eight men were involved.

The bus had picked up 30-35 persons to take to school.

"This bus goes by here every day, so they must know about it," said one settler. "Also, five minutes earlier a taxi and a truck drove by and nothing happened."

The Foreign Ministry said the letter to the Security Council stressed "the gravity of this crime perpetrated against innocent school children."

The Israeli raiders hit Port Safage, 250 miles southeast of

Church Can Make Demands Too

KANSAS CITY (AP) — The Linwood United Methodist Church has rejected demands by the Black Panthers for 50 per cent of its income, and has countered with six demands of its own.

The Panthers, who now call themselves "Sons of Malcolm," made their demands in a "Manifesto" which was read by a group that marched into the church Easter Sunday. The manifesto, besides the money item, contained four other demands dealing with racial conflict.

The church is at 31st and Olive, formerly an all-white area, now a predominantly Negro neighborhood.

Dr. Ralph Roland, pastor, said the reply by the church's administrative board included these demands:

"That you cease all demands white racism be abolished while you practice black racism."

"That you immediately cease all types of coercion, harassment and intimidation that tends to prejudice people of all races against giving to agencies that are honestly trying to improve the lot of those in the inner city."

"That you make an attempt to find out about programs sponsored by the Linwood United Methodist Church."

"That you recognize the extent of contributions already made to help the inner city area and cease all actions which might prejudice further contributions." The paper listed $100,000 in contributions to inner city programs in a five-year period.

"That you share your income to these causes as you have demanded of us."

"That you channel your obvious intelligence and leadership into constructive actions which will help all peoples get along together, rather than set race against race, and class against class."

Pete O'Neal, former head of the Panthers and now Sons of Malcolm chairman, said Thursday he hadn't received the church's reply, which church officials said was sent to him by registered mail Wednesday.

O'Neal said if the church refused to meet any of the demands made in the manifesto, "the people of the community will be at Reverend Roland's church Sunday to confront him."

He would not explain what he meant by "confront."

A bomb damaged the exterior of the church April 4, but church officials said they did not necessarily connect it with the manifesto.

Pick Burke As Leader Of Jaycees

Robert J. Burke, 32, was elected president of the Sedalia Jaycees at a meeting Thursday night at the Catholic Community Center. A member of the Jaycees for five years, Burke has served on the board of directors for three years and has been active in Jaycee community affairs projects.

He was given a SPOKE award in 1968 and received a Spark-Plug award in 1968 and 1969. In October of 1969 Burke was honored as the Jaycee of the Month and was listed in "Outstanding Young Men of America" for 1968. One of the club's top awards went to Burke in 1968 when he was selected Jaycee of the Year.

Burke is an assistant sales manager for Interstate Studio.

Elected to serve with Burke were: Joe Doggett, first vice president; Dick Ink, second vice president; Jim Hurst, secretary; Keith Rowland, treasurer; and directors Sam Morton, Bob Wiley, Vaughn Hart, Walter Bell and Bernard Herndon.

Announcement was also made Thursday night of awards received by the Sedalia Jaycees in Jefferson City at the state convention. Included were awards to Adam Fischer, president, as a leader of the "Tiger Corps," and a second place win went to the club for their participation in the mental health and mental retardation "Honey Sunday" program.

Airport Expansion Start Is Expected By March

By GARNETT JOSEPH
Democrat-Capital Staff Writer

Dr. Holmes Wilbur, chairman of the Sedalia Airport Board, said Thursday that he was confident construction would begin on expansion of the Sedalia Airport by next March.

Dr. Wilbur's statement came after President Nixon signed a bill Thursday authorizing $2.5 billion in federal funds for the nation's aviation system over the next 10 years.

"We are definitely in line for some of these funds. The Federal Aviation Administration will send notice for applications and we will file a new application for aid. Their position is that we are eligible for funds," Wilbur explained.

The FAA funds would become available after the start of the new fiscal year, July 1. Sedalia's application for $700,000 in federal aid last year was turned down, but Wilbur said it was because the bill authorizing the aid had expired.

He added that the FAA has already given the go-ahead for the city to secure property for the expansion.

City counselor Bob Fritz told The Democrat that condemnation proceedings should be coming up in Circuit Court within the next few weeks and expressed hope that the property, which consists of 300 acres, would be in the city's hands well before the projected March construction date.

The city's bid for an expanded airport with regular passenger service was dealt a damaging blow late last year when the Bureau of Operating Rights of the Civil Aeronautics Board and Ozark Airlines filed against a CAB examiner's recommendation that Ozark be granted an operating certificate here. Ozark claimed that regular service to Sedalia would result in a high operating deficit.

At that time it appeared the chance of getting matching federal funds for the airport was slim, but Wilbur said Thursday, "We can obtain aid under this new bill regardless of what Ozark does."

The airport bonds can supply only half of the money needed for the expansion and Wilbur said the city would not go ahead unless federal aid was forthcoming. "The FAA will set the guidelines and the amount we will get. We may not get our plan completed in one year, but the FAA should have enough to get us going next March," he stated.

The airport expansion plan calls for construction of a new north-south landing strip, improved terminal and navigational facilities and lengthening and widening of the present runway.

Wilbur said he hoped Sedalians weren't giving up on the airport expansion which was authorized in a $790,000 bond election Sept. 24, 1968. "It seems slow, but it's coming," he added.

Pastor Ends 13-Year Tour Here

Moving South

The Rev. Harry Purviance, pastor of the First Christian Church here, will be taking up new duties in St. Petersburg, Fla., in July. Mr. Purviance has lived here the last 13 years. (Democrat-Capital Photo)

"It is time for a change for both the church and for me," commented the Rev. Harry Purviance, pastor for the past 13 years of the First Christian Church, 200 South Limit Ave.

Mr. Purviance will leave Sedalia and the pastorate of the Sedalia church to assume the pastorate of the Mirror Lake Christian Church, St. Petersburg, Fla., on July 1. His final service here will be June 28.

The Sedalia pastor and his wife, Frances, and two daughters, Dianne, 20, and Debra, 16, came to Sedalia in 1957 from Lubbock, Tex. There he was the pastor of the Lubbock View Christian Church for eight years.

Looking back at his ministry in the Sedalia area, Mr. Purviance noted his most exasperating and most rewarding moments in the church, both related to the building project marked by completion of the present church in March, 1964.

He stated that "feelings of anticipation grew greater with the fast coming completion of the new church, but a delay of five months was very disheartening. But in turn, the day the congregation held its first Sunday worship service in the new building he knew it was well worth the wait."

Other accomplishments Mr. Purviance cites include cutting the original building debt from $250,000 in 1964 to the present balance of $50,000.

An accomplishment of special significance to Mr. Purviance is the fact that two young men from his church have entered the ministry: the Rev. John Kenny, Jr., presently the pastor of the First Christian Church of Macon, Mo., and Dale Carson, presently a student at Brite Divinity College at T.C.U. Both men studied the Bible in the Sedalia church, and made decisions to make the ministry their work under the guidance of Mr. Purviance.

Mr. Purviance has been a member of many community organizations. He is past president of the Pettis County Tuberculosis Association and the Sedalia Ministers Association. He was an active member in the Lion's Club, the Granite Lodge of the Masonic Order and also served on several community organizations, including the steering committee for the State Fair Community College bond drive.

KDRO Speaker

The Rev. Melvin Geffert, pastor of St. Paul's Lutheran Church, 301 East Broadway, will be in charge of Morning Devotions on KDRO at 8:45 a.m. May 25-29.

THAT'S PROGRESS

MANCHESTER, England (AP) — Russia is catching up with the British way of death. So far the U.S.S.R. has only one crematorium in Moscow, but state funeral authorities recently ordered $396,000 worth of equipment from a British company to equip a new installation in Moscow, and the British company hopes the order will lead to a contract to supply similar equipment throughout Russia.

Besides the more than a dozen clergy imprisoned for antiwar activity, Dr. Allen Brick, an officer of the Fellowship of Reconciliation, a pacifist group, says hundreds of others have been arrested and detained briefly in that cause.

Also, he notes, numerous seminarians are among the approximately 700 young men in prison for resisting the draft.

The Rev. Dr. John Bennett, president of Union Theological Seminary, says the current cases against clergymen are "much more striking" than those in the past, and adds that he fears "we're going to see more of this." But he points out such cases are not new in Christian history.

One of the Catonsville, Md., 9, the Rev. Daniel Berrigan, a Jesuit priest poet and chaplain at Cornell University, last month became a fugitive from justice, jumping bail to spurn a date for his surrender to begin a three-year prison term. In hiding with friends, he writes:

"I refuse, for the time being, to submit before a system of power which in condemning me, condemns itself as an instrument of exploitation and murder in Vietnam and elsewhere."

Scores of other clergymen have gone to jail for brief periods or been arrested in recent times in protests against the war, including many among the 73 persons arrested early this month in an antiwar worship service in Washington across the street from the White House. Most forfeited $25 bail each.

Other issues have been involved in some clergy cases, such as demonstrations against racial discrimination in hiring or poverty conditions.

Demonstrations in behalf of the blacks and the poor also have landed ministers in jail in recent months. But most of the latest clergy-prosecution cases have been for antiwar acts.

The court cases, in which clergymen and other draft resisters have been tried and sentenced to prison for destroying draft files, form a lengthening roster, labeled by geography and numbers, including:

The "D.C. 9" four clergymen, one nun, the "Milwaukee 14" seven clergymen, the "Catonsville 9" two clergymen, two order brothers, the "Baltimore 4" two clergymen—altogether 15 clergymen, plus two seminarians, two brothers, a nun, an ex-nun and ex-priest.

A graduate of Bible Standard College, Eugene, Ore., Mr. Newell has done graduate work in Portland, Ore., and Pella, Iowa. He was an associate pastor in Pella for two years. His wife, Priscilla, majored in Christian education at B.S.C.

Lutheran Churches In Joint Venture

Two Lutheran Churches in Sedalia will hold a joint Vacation Church School this summer, following a national "declaration of fellowship" between the two church bodies.

Christ Lutheran Church (ALC) and Our Savior Lutheran (LCMS) will hold the school June 1-12, with certain grade groups meeting at each church.

Theme for the Church School will be "Neighbor," a study of the Christian's life in his own and the world neighborhood.

DETROIT (AP) — General Motors shareholders gather today in their annual meeting and most will vote against an attempt by consumer advocate Ralph Nader to open the world's largest industrial firm to greater participation by the general public.

"We think that the vote will have implications far beyond this corporation," GM Board Chairman James M. Roche said in a premeeting statement.

"What is significant about the meeting is that for the first time so large a segment of the public—and we think 1,350,000 stockholders is a good segment of the public—will have a chance to cast a vote whether General Motors is fulfilling its responsibilities to society."

Backers of the dissident movement sponsored by the Washington-based Project on Corporate Responsibility say the proxy vote is not the measure of success or failure for the effort.

Philip W. Moore, 27, executive secretary for the group which calls itself the Campaign to Make GM Responsible—or Campaign GM—declared:

"We expect to have full debate on the issues at the meeting, and this was a primary goal."

The meeting was scheduled to begin at 3 p.m. EDT. A vote on the two Campaign GM proposals was not expected until early evening.

The Campaign GM proposals request enlargement of the 23-man GM board of directors by three so-called public oriented members and formation of a stockholders committee to study and evaluate the corporation's performance in such areas as auto safety, air pollution control, mass transit, plant safety, social welfare and others.

Moore said before the meeting that two per cent of the votes cast out of the 285 million outstanding shares would be a reasonable goal.

Announcements of support before the meeting totaled about 300,000 shares, he said.

Another proposal before the meeting—opposed by management—would limit executive pay to a total of $350,000 a year per man. A similar proposal last year received support of nearly 16 million shares.

The Nader campaigners indicated they were disappointed by support from institutions of various sorts which own some 12 per cent of the corporation's common stock.

"We didn't feel they gave us the type of support we expected," said Joe Onek, one of the organizers of the Campaign.

Ambush

Suez and 87 miles south of Sharm el Sheikh, the nearest Israeli-held point on the Sinai Peninsula, a spokesman said.

All Israeli forces returned safely, he reported.

The spokesman gave no further details. Six days ago, Israeli warplanes sank an Egyptian destroyer and a missile boat in the Red Sea south of Safaga. That attack was retaliation for the sinking of an Israeli fishing trawler by Egyptian missiles, the Israelis said.

The ambush of the bus and the killing or wounding of so many children was certain to touch off a public outcry in Israel for vengeance, and it was considered likely that the Israeli armed forces would retaliate with another major raid into southern Lebanon.

The Lebanese government announced that half an hour after the ambush Israeli artillery opened up on the Lebanese border towns of Bint Jbeil and Yaroun near the site, killing one woman, and injuring two women and two children. The Lebanese said their artillery replied, and the duel was continuing three hours later.

A while later, the Lebanese said a third border settlement, Aitaroun, two miles from Bint Jbeil, was under fire and the toll had risen to four dead and more than 40 wounded.

In Amman, the Jordanian capital, the ultra-left Popular Front for the Liberation of Palestine-General Command claimed credit for the ambush on the school bus, it said three rockets hit the bus at close range, destroying it, and that Israeli troops who rushed to pursue the raiders ran into a minefield, suffering more casualties. It said that all the raiders returned safely to their bases.

The General Command is the small group that claimed to have sabotaged the Swissair jetliner that crashed Feb. 21 and then retracted the claim.

Apparently expecting an Israeli air attack, the Lebanese air force sent up Mirage jets over Beirut for protective patrols.

Low-Cost Housing Is Topic

SMITHTON — The Smithton Board of Aldermen met with the town's Housing Authority Thursday night to discuss moves toward building public housing units here.

On hand was Frank Schwarzer, executive director of the Show-Me Regional Planning Commission, who discussed the steps required to begin such a project.

Two resolutions were passed, essentially the same, one by the Board of Aldermen and one by the Housing authority. The resolutions approved application to the Department of Housing and Urban Development (HUD) for a preliminary loan which is needed to pay initial expenses, investigate public housing in other communities, and hire an executive director to represent the Housing Authority in business matters.

Quota System For Footwear Recommended

ST. LOUIS (AP)—A limited quota system on shoe imports was suggested by Sen. Stuart Symington, D - Mo., Thursday night as necessary to help shoe manufacturers withstand foreign competition.

Symington, addressing the United Shoe Workers of America, said the average wage for American shoe workers in mid-1969 was $2.29 an hour, not high in comparison with the average industrial wage in this country, but very high compared with foreign wages.

The senator said Italian shoe manufacturers pay workers $1.04 an hour, in Spain the wage is 56 cents an hour and in Japan 58 cents.

"Is it any wonder that American producers find it increasingly difficult to compete with this foreign production?" Symington asked.

In 1969, Symington said, the United States imported 196 million pairs of shoes, an 11.5 per cent increase over 1968.

Town Struggling To Keep Identity

GOMEZ, Fla. (AP)—Gomez used to have a post office, a train station, and a problem of identity.

The Atlantic coastal town was said to be an important rum-running place during Prohibition, but the town dried after its repeal.

The post office was discontinued in 1943, and then the station was blown away in a 1949 hurricane.

And now only a few families still live in the area.

"We stopped calling it Gomez," said Mrs. Willie Pettway, who operates a grocery store near the old town site.

"When people used to ask me where I lived, I'd say 'Gomez.' Then they would say, 'Where in the world is that?' So now when people ask me where I live I say, 'North Hobe Sound,' and everybody's got to know that North Hobe Sound's north of Hobe Sound."

Speeding Ambulances

Pettis county doctors are becoming interested in a new facet of human ecology, the interrelationship between men and their environment.

Currently the emphasis is on speeding ambulances and wailing sirens which produce noise pollution.

Men of the medical profession are urging city council to do something about eliminating what some persons have categorized as nuisances.

Research and statistics on the national level have been produced to strengthen the proposal that speeding ambulances are unnecessary and harmful; for instance, the average time saved by speeding and violating other traffic laws was only 2.7 minutes in an average of eight miles; and in 92 per cent of ambulance calls checked there was no justification for speeding.

The doctors have a case here. Consensus seems to be that ambulance acceleration on Sedalia streets should conform to the limitations prescribed for ordinary vehicular traffic; that running red lights is a hazard; that sirens could at least be partially muted.

What about the fire trucks and police cars, including those of the two chiefs, someone asks. Are we going to slow them down, too?

Listening to a fire engine's siren, one might conclude the truck would take off into the air if it had wings. But if these vehicles ever travel more than 30 miles an hour to any fire, that appears to be an exaggeration. They get to where they are directed solely without breaking speed laws, albeit they do not stop for traffic lights. Police cars are about the same as fire trucks answering emergency calls. These two departments are a part of city government service whereas ambulances operate as the function of private business in Sedalia.

Doctors hope to eventually obtain more comprehensive statewide regulations than limitation of ambulance speeds and sirens. They want to include regulation of equipment, insurance rates, and attendant training, among other controls.

This adventure of the medical profession into a new category of human ecology portends the possibility of broadening the protective purposes for society as they apply currently to speeding and noisy ambulances.

The dialogues that will ensue in city council should enliven the proceedings there during subsequent sessions.

Washington Merry-Go-Round

Objections to Horror Scenes

WASHINGTON — A caustic White House memo, intended for internal use only, accuses the Columbia Broadcasting System of "irresponsibility" and questions whether the Federal Communications Commission should investigate.

All that holds back the White House from referring the charges to the FCC, an aide told this column, is concern that the motive might be misunderstood.

Since Vice President Agnew's attack upon the TV networks, CBS has been the boldest about continuing its criticism of the Nixon Administration. Some aides fear, therefore, that an FCC investigation would look like an attempt to intimidate CBS.

The White House memo, charging that CBS has been involved in "highly questionable activity," cites these alleged incidents:

The CBS news department (1) faked horror scenes from Vietnam on at least three occasions; (2) planned "a staged invasion" of Haiti; (3) "staged incidents of police brutality" during the 1968 Democratic convention; and (4) arranged to film an illegal "pot party" in Chicago.

Freedom Vs. Fraud

The memo suggests tartly that CBS shouldn't be allowed to use "freedom of the press" to get away with "fraud by the press."

Attached to the memo is a report from the Pentagon on the phony horror scenes. The most dramatic was an October 7, 1967 film of a GI attempting to slice the ear off a dead enemy soldier.

Alleges the Pentagon report: "Don Webster and John Smith of CBS were involved in an incident in which a soldier attempted to cut off the ear of a dead enemy soldier with a knife furnished by Smith."

After the film was shown on the Walter Cronkite news show, Specialist George A. Pawlaszky was arrested for the deed. Continues the Pentagon report:

"Both Smith and Webster were subpoenaed at the trial... but neither appeared... Specialist Pawlaszky was found guilty as charged. At the request of the American Embassy, no further action was taken against Smith, who was listed as a principal in the case."

Two years after the ear-cutting episode, the same Don Webster narrated another knife scene. A South Vietnamese soldier was filmed on Nov. 3, 1969, stabbing a captured Viet Cong in the presence of U.S. personnel.

"Cut and Paste" Job—

The Pentagon report alleges that Webster refused to cooperate with the Army investigation, "claiming protection of news sources." The investigation "established that the film was taken by a Vietnamese and that Webster was not present during the filming."

The American Embassy later reported that "the CBS film was a 'cut and paste' job involving different locales and personnel." The Army was "unsuccessful in gaining the assistance of CBS during the investigation. To date, the personnel involved in the incident have not been identified."

Again on February 17, 1970, CBS showed a South Vietnamese soldier "covering the face of a detainee with a towel and pouring water on it, thereby restricting his breathing. Also included was a brief shot of an alleged U.S. adviser watching the incident."

But CBS again refused to cooperate with the Army investigators who, consequently, "have been unable to identify the personnel involved." In contrast, NBC furnished the Army with full information about a filmed beating incident that a U.S. officer watched, leading to disciplinary action.

CBS news director Gordon Manning explained to the Defense Department: "It is our policy to protect the security of our people in the field and the sanctity of news judgments and editing processes."

There can be no defense for faking the news, and CBS would be better advised to cooperate with the Army in clearing up the allegations.

—Behind the Scenes—

Rap Brown's Whereabouts — The Central Intelligence Agency has been asked to investigate a report that black militant H. Rap Brown, high on the FBI's "most wanted" list, has slipped out of the country and joined fellow rabble-rouser Eldridge Cleaver in Algeria. Brown ducked out on his trial for allegedly inciting a riot in connection with the May, 1967, racial disorders in Cambridge, Md. The report that Brown is now in Algeria, though unconfirmed, is considered "highly reliable."

Gruening's Cavities—Alaska's elfish, ex-Sen. Ernest Gruening, afflicted with an aching back, consulted the doctors at the Bethesda Naval Hospital who specialize in treating Presidents, Cabinet members, Senators and other VIPs. The eminent specialists gave him a thorough going over, concluded that decayed teeth were causing his back trouble and recommended that they be pulled. The 83-year-old Gruening, a Harvard medical graduate of 1912, thought this was a pretty drastic diagnosis and consulted his civilian dentist. The X-rays showed that Gruening's teeth were perfectly good, so a comparison was made with the Navy X-rays. This revealed that the Navy doctors had based their diagnosis on the wrong X-rays.

Captured Newsman—Richard Dudman, the St. Louis Post-Dispatch reporter captured by the Viet Cong in Cambodia, never let danger interfere with getting the facts. Colleagues recall that a grenade exploded near his car during the 1965 Dominican civil war. Dudman's two companion journalists dived from the auto into the gutter. Dudman glanced quickly up toward the balcony from which the grenade came, made a brief scribble in his notebook, then dived from the car. Reports filtering out of the Cambodian jungles say farmers saw Dudman's balding figure being led from his car at gunpoint into the underbrush. He was protesting to his captors, say the reports, that he wanted to jot it all down in his notebook.

NORTH BAY (Ont.) NUGGET: A Real Home. — A home is not really a home without ample time for easy and spontaneous relationships among its people, without expression of real interest in the concerns and problems and idiosyncracies of all, without real companionship, without the dynamic of authentic love which is the outgoing concern for the real good and well-being of others.

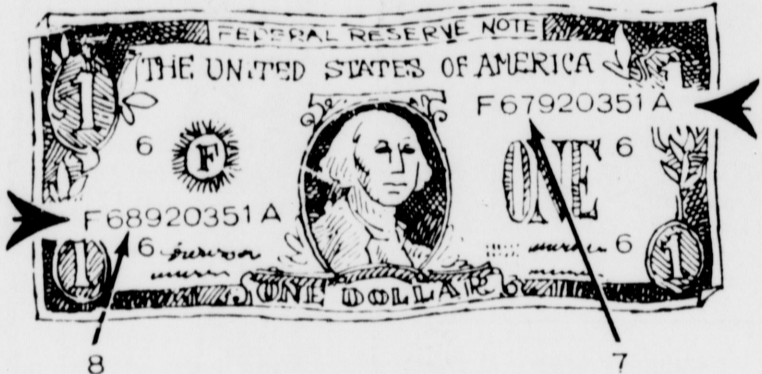

In our time we are learning—and we are learning it the hard way—that no occasional and slickly synthesized "togetherness" supported by all the modern conveniences, can compensate for deficiencies in the deep spiritual qualifications which make up a home really a home.

MONEY CLIPS

Mismatched Numbers---

Keep a weather eye on your $1 bills. Printing errors on any product other than that of the Bureau of Engraving and Printing usually cost money. But a mistake on a piece of paper currency can be profitable to the holder.

A recent article in Coin World disclosed a major error on Atlanta Federal Reserve District $1 notes of the 1969 series. Mismatched serial numbers. The illustration above has been specially prepared to accentuate the numbers involved in the mistake.

Previously known mismatches often command premium prices only because the off-registry is detected before too many have passed the inspector. But in this case the difference was not noted in time and an under-terminated number of Atlanta $1 notes were placed in circulation. They are just now beginning to show up.

A collector's value is yet to be determined but a case in point is the 1957 Silver Certificate with mismatched numbers. At present, it has an uncirculated catalogue value of $39.50 for a $1 note and there were 10,000 error pieces printed in that series.

So far, the error seems to be limited to those notes bearing the Atlanta District letter (F) and the number (6). The letter is located in the large district seal above the left-hand serial and the number is repeated four times on the field of the note.

This column would appreciate knowing whether or not any of these bills are actually found by readers. In the meantime, we will make every effort to keep abreast of the pricing development and when a value has been fixed for mismatched notes in any condition, it will be passed along.

Order Forms for 1970 Coin Sets

Again, as they have done in the past, publishers of Coin World are making 1970 uncirculated coin set order forms available to readers of Money Clips. These forms will help expedite your 1970 purchase and eliminate costly or disappointing errors. The only requirement is a self-addressed, stamped envelope mailed to Margo Russell, Editor, Coin World, P.O. Box 150, Sidney, Ohio 45365.

You may order as many forms as you may need but Coin World asks that the number be kept within reason.

Opening date for orders has passed. Requests for forms should be made immediately to facilitate processing.

For every expert there are 10 self-appointed experts. This second group think they are experts. They know a lot of things experts do but they get them just a trifle wrong and wind up losing contracts that a real expert or an average player would have no trouble with.

South's bidding is typical of this group of masterminds. Once his partner jumped in hearts he was off to a grand slam by way of Blackwood. Still, the contract was a good one.

Mr. John Average Player would count 12 top tricks only and would draw trumps and eventually finesse successfully for the queen of clubs to score his 13th trick.

An expert would see a chance for a dummy reversal play. He would cash dummy's ace of trumps at trick two to make sure that all five trumps wouldn't show up in one hand. After both opponents followed he would ruff a spade and lead a second trump to dummy's queen. Assuming both opponents followed he would ruff another spade, enter dummy with the king of diamonds, ruff the last spade with his own last trump, enter dummy with the ace of clubs, pull the last enemy trump with dummy's seven while discarding his last low club and make the rest of the tricks with the king of clubs and three good diamonds.

However, when East showed out on the second trump, South would abandon this play, draw trumps and finally fall back on the club finesse.

Our hero knew about dummy reversals but he did not know about 4-1 trump breaks. He ruffed a spade at trick two, entered dummy with a diamond to ruff another spade and eventually had to let West make a little trump.

War Classic Key To Viet Strategy

By RAY CROMLEY
NEA Washington Correspondent

WASHINGTON — Sometimes a book has a powerful effect on a man. On occasion, the emotional shock of what it reports will determine the course of a war — or a campaign.

This then is the story of how, indirectly, a book made the Cambodian venture less of a gamble by insuring (psychologically) that American forces committed to the attack would get out quickly — not be trapped into staying.

For if there is anything President Nixon knows, it is that battles are uncertain things. A small engagement can lead to total involvement. A battalion can bog down, be surrounded and call for help. And the resulting battles go on endlessly.

How then could Nixon risk going into Cambodia? How could he be so certain he would escape entrapment? How accept the confident assessment of his military?

The story goes back to 1961 when a reporter (and one-time French soldier) Bernard Fall wrote "Street Without Joy," a book once "required" reading for American officers headed for Vietnam.

The title of Chapter 9 is End of a Task Force. It describes the death of an elite jungle-trained, battle-wise French reinforced regiment, Mobile Group 100. It was isolated and cut to pieces little by little in the back country of Vietnam.

Gen. William Westmoreland read "Street Without Joy" and studied that chapter and that campaign. And it made a deep and lasting impression.

He determined that never, while he was in a position of command or authority, would he take the chance of losing a major American unit — a battalion, a regiment, a brigade or a division. He would never, however tempted, let a battalion get into a position from which it could not be rescued.

A number of years back, when Westmoreland was in command in Vietnam, on sound intelligence information he began a campaign in an area near the Cambodian border.

But as the operation got under way, and after major elements had been committed, the rains came ahead of schedule. The units began to bog down. The men, their trucks and their artillery were mired in water and mud. Westmoreland did not reinforce. He pulled them out quickly and abandoned the campaign. The reward for victory would have been sizable. But he would not risk the loss of a battalion.

This caution he carried through Vietnam. He carries it still.

In Cambodia today the rains are starting. In some areas they are already heavy. By the end of June they will be a threat to landbound units. It will be possible for aircraft to fly by choosing the right day and hour. Infantry can't pick the hour or day. Once in, it's tied to the mud. It would be possible — perhaps — for some troops to operate at some periods. But at one time or another they would be sitting ducks for North Vietnamese units familiar with the terrain.

Men in a position to know have told this reporter Nixon is well-aware that the fate of French Mobile Group 100 is much on Westmoreland's mind and that of Gen. Creighton Abrams.

There is reason to believe this knowledge has given the President confidence that no "reason" will suddenly be found for keeping American troops in Cambodian Communist bases after June 30.

Heat, Gentle Massage Help in Osteoarthritis

By WAYNE G. BRANDSTADT, M.D.

Q—According to my X-ray report, I have a congenital lumbarization of my lumbosacral joint. What does this mean? Is it related to spina bifida?

In lumbarization the first segment of the sacrum (normally one solid one) is not fused to the second segment. This is an oddity, not a disease. It is not related to spina bifida.

Q—What is cervical spondylitis? Is there any cure for it?

A—This is a degeneration of the disk between the vertebrae of the neck, a form of osteoarthritis. It is usually an accompaniment of aging. Although there is no cure, the application of heat and gentle massage are helpful. The neck should not be moved forcibly. If the pain is severe and persistent it may be necessary to wear a brace.

Q—I am terrified of bees. A man in the next block has a bee farm so there are always lots of bees around. How can I protect myself when I go out?

A—Bees will not bother you if you don't bother them unless you are wearing perfume or scented cosmetics or a flowery printed dress—plain light colors will not attract them. If you have previously been stung, you may be sensitive to bee venom so, to be on the safe side, you should have your doctor give you desensitizing shots.

Q—Last fall I was stung on the arm by a wasp. The severe itching lasted for two or three days but a dull aching has persisted. What do you advise?

A—Although the pain of a wasp sting is severe, it should not last more than a couple of days. Some other cause for your present pain should be sought.

Q—I have heard that taking vitamin B will keep mosquitoes from biting. Is this true?

A—Very doubtful, but mosquitoes prefer skin that has a temperature over 90 degrees. That is why some persons appear to be immune to their bites. Their skin temperature hovers between 87 and 89 degrees. Mosquitoes also prefer to bite persons with alcohol in their blood, probably because this increases the skin temperature. Heavy breathing also attracts them. They show a preference for black, dark red and dark blue and tend to avoid white, yellow and light green fabrics. A good repellent for external use is diethyltoluamide (Deet).

Thought for Today

I hope you will find out that we have not failed. But we pray God that you may not do wrong — not that we may appear to have met the test, but that you may do what is right, though we may seem to have failed. — II Cor. 13:6, 7.

Looking Backward

—Ninety-five Years Ago—

This is the season for house cleaning and Mrs. Col Monroe, true to womanly instincts, was engaged in this manner. She chanced to unearth a box of morphine pills which had long since been forgotten. By mere accident little Frank, a year-old son, got hold of and swallowed six or eight. An effective cathartic was administered and Dr. Evans called, and what might have been a fatal termination, was averted. The incident proves that the greatest care should be exercised to prevent such occurrences.

—Forty Years Ago—

Directors of the Sedalia Chamber of Commerce adopted a resolution submitted by Walter J. Brill and Don S. Lamm unanimously in favor of naming the new hospital, the Bothwell Memorial and not the General Hospital, as indicated by the tablet now on the front of the building. The resolution was later approved by city council.

Ann Landers

Loyalty No Excuse For Plain Stupidity

Dear Ann Landers: I am 16 and worried. Most of my friends smoke pot. Some of them have freaked out on LSD. I don't touch any of it. My folks got upset once when they found an ordinary cigarette butt in my room. They have a good opinion of me and I'd hate to let them down.

Every weekend I wind up with kids who are blowing grass or dropping acid. I realize if they get busted and I'm with them, I will be hauled in and charged, too. This scares me. It would kill my folks. The drug laws are lousy in this state and some good kids have gotten themselves bugged up because they want to show the authorities they have no respect for unjust laws. Please don't tell me to make new friends. I can't. These are the kids I grew up with and I dig them, except for the way they mess with drugs. What should I do? — Loyal Lynn

Dear L. L.: If you insist on hanging around with a crowd that blows grass, drops acid and defies the law, be prepared to accept the consequences. Call it loyalty if you want to. I call it stupidity and short-sightedness. The law is going to do more busting starting now. Making criminals out of sick people is, in my opinion, a poor approach to the problem, but when the citizenry becomes frightened and fear takes over, rationality loses out.

There are no easy answers to this one. We cannot afford to turn our country over to a generation of half-stoned pot heads. Nor can we allow potential achievers to fry their brains with LSD, speed and heroin. Unfortunately, a problem that should be handled by physicians is winding up more and more in the hands of the police. So brace yourself. The situation is going to get worse before it gets better.

Dear Ann Landers: I have a message for the young woman who adopted my child. I don't know who she is or where she is, but I'll bet she reads Ann Landers. Will you please print this?

Dear Friend: It was just a few years ago that I gave you my baby. I knew then as I know now, it was the only thing to do. I wanted her to have every advantage in life. I knew I couldn't give her what she was entitled to.

You and your husband wanted a child. The people in charge of the adoption told me as much as they could without revealing your identity. I was certain you would give my little girl oceans of love and that she would have the kind of upbringing every child deserves. I didn't have her long — but I knew she was a very good baby, in perfect health, and beautiful, too. It took more strength to give her up than I thought I had, but I thank the good Lord for giving me that strength because I know in my heart it was the right thing to do.

Last year I married a wonderful man. Soon I will have a baby of my own. But I shall never forget my first born. I'll always shed a few quiet tears on her birthday, and wonder where she is, what she looks like and what she is doing. I will always love her — and I will love you, too, for giving her what I could not. May God watch over you and my little girl. — No City No State No Initials

Dear Friend: Thank you for a beautiful letter. I wouldn't dream of printing a clue to your identity. Thousands of women will believe your letter was meant for them. And I wouldn't want it any other way.

Narcotics War Hub Designated In Kansas City

MINNEAPOLIS, Minn. (AP) — Kansas City will become the regional headquarters for the Midwest Federal Narcotics Bureau, John E. Ingersoll, director of the Bureau of Narcotics and Dangerous Drugs, said Thursday.

The regional office will be moved to Kansas City from Minneapolis and Ernest H. Hall, regional director in Minneapolis, will continue in that capacity at the new location, Ingersoll said.

The move is part of a realignment of the Midwest region under which three of the four states in Region 9—Minnesota, North Dakota and South Dakota—would be combined with the Region 10 states of Missouri, Kansas, Nebraska and Iowa.

Killed in Action

WASHINGTON (AP) — Two Missourians have been changed from a list of missing to killed in action in the war in Southeast Asia, the Defense Department said Thursday.

The two were Army CW 2 Charles G. Dougan, son of Mr. and Mrs. Charles D. Dougan, Graham, and Army Spec. 4 Larry D. Buffington, son of Mr. and Mrs. Alvy D. Buffington, Rt. 2, Piedmont.

Testimony Points Out Impersonalism

NEW YORK (AP) — Jim Brosnan came home from work at the ball park one day in 1954 to find his wife rather upset.

She said it was because of the steaks. Brosnan now knows it was because of the reserve clause.

Brosnan, owned by the Chicago Cubs organization, would travel up and down the minor league ladder five times during the 1954 season, the reserve system permitting the parent club to transfer his contract whenever and wherever they decided.

When he came home this particular day there was a notice to pack up and move on.

"My wife threatened to divorce me," the pitcher-author explained in court Tuesday as he testified in the Curt Flood suit against baseball. "She had just bought two weeks of steaks to put in the freezer. She wanted to know what to do with the steaks."

And, asked counsel just to complete the record, could Brosnan say what she finally did with the steaks.

"She gave them," replied Brosnan, "to the player who reported in my place."

The little story, which brought laughter to the courtroom, made a big point for Flood's position that baseball's reserve system can influence the lives of players in small ways as well as large.

Proving that the reserve system is too restrictive as presently constituted is a key to Flood's contention that baseball operates in restraint of trade and therefore violates federal antitrust statutes.

Brosnan, who became more famous as an author than he was successful as a pitcher when he wrote "The Long Season," also pointed out that restrictive clauses in the player contract had kept him from having his work published during the playing season.

All of Brosnan's testimony, coming as it did from a player of average skills, obviously was designed to contrast with the testimony given earlier in the day by two Hall of Fame greats — Hank Greenberg and Jackie Robinson.

Greenberg, the slugging first baseman for the Detroit Tigers, was far more the effective witness, calm and in control of himself at all times. Robinson, the former star of the Brooklyn Dodgers, tended to be emotional and fidgeted with his eye glasses throughout most of his testimony.

Citing the reserve clause as "obsolete and antiquated" Greenberg said the sport "definitely needs a change to help cement relations between the players and the owners. It also would give a better image for the public so the game can prosper and flourish."

Greenberg, who also talks from front office experience as a one-time part-owner of two different clubs, said the reserve clause—actually the option renewal clause—was "a unilateral contract in which the player has no choice but to accept terms because he can't play elsewhere."

Greenberg suggested the clause be eliminated and replaced by a provision that only bound a player to a club for a certain number of years. He said it could be accomplished by owner-player negotiation. "I would prefer the owners would change it of their own volition."

Robinson, as provocative as when he was a player, characterized the reserve clause as "one-sided in favor of the owners" and said if it was not modified it would lead to a strike by the players.

"Anything that is one-sided in this country is wrong," Robinson said. "The reserve clause is one-sided in favor of the owners. It is so one-sided that the players don't really have control over their own destiny."

Under cross-examination by Mark Hughes, counsel for the owners, Robinson was asked if he had made a statement before a 1958 U.S. Senate subcommittee in which he said, "I am highly in favor of the reserve clause." Robinson agreed he could have said that.

Arthur Goldberg, former Supreme Court Justice, now a New York State gubernatorial candidate, asked and received permission to put in the trial record the entire paragraph of the 1958 testimony from which that one sentence had been taken.

In the rest of the paragraph, Robinson had pointed out "I think they (the players) should be able to express themselves as to whether or not they want to play for a certain club. I don't believe the owners should have all the control."

Phillies Rally For 4-3 Win

PHILADELPHIA (AP)—They sang Richie Allen's song at Connie Mack stadium Thursday night—BOO!

Allen made his first appearance here since the Philadelphia Phillies dealt the controversial star to the St. Louis Cardinals. An unusually large midweek crowd of 11,769 turned out, many carrying banners.

"Allen MVP" hung over one railing. "How do you like your new babysitter, Richie?" read another.

Allen, whose stormy career with the Phillies included a fist fight with a teammate, missed planes, missed games, suspensions, and a running feud with the booging fans, took his return to town in stride.

Asked how he felt about fighting in the stands, beer cans tossed on the field and the chorus of boos which greeted him, Allen said, "You have to expect that kind of stuff here. I'm used to it."

There were cheers and applause too, for the 28-year-old Allen. At times it was hard to distinguish whether there were more boos than cheers. Allen gave his detractors and his supporters their innings.

In his first time at bat, he hit into a double play. The second time up he lined to center, and he struck out on his third appearance against Phillies' left hander Woody Fryman.

Then came the ninth inning with the Phillies leading 3-0. With one out and a runner at first, Allen laced a home run into the left field seats. The Cards scored another and tied the game. The Phillies, however, rallied in their half of the ninth to win 4-3 on Tony Taylor's two-out single which scored John Briggs from second base.

Did Allen get a charge out of stifling the boo-birds with his dramatic home run?

"Nah," he mumbled in a reluctant interview with reporters after the game. Speaking so softly that you had to stick your ear in his face to hear, Allen added, "I done that here before. You've got to win."

Allen and Fryman agreed that the home run came off of a slider down and in. Fryman said of Allen, "He's one of the best hitters in baseball. He knows more about hitting, more about pitching than any other hitter in the National League. He's not just brute force. He's a scientific hitter."

Allen's 14th home run of the season was his third off Philadelphia pitching. He hit a game winning homer, and another that helped the Cards come from behind to win a game in St. Louis last week over his old mates.

Allen's mother, Mrs. Era Allen from Wampum, Pa., and his wife, Barbara, were in the stands. His mother was asked how she reacted to the booging of her son. She replied, "I'm used to small people."

The Phillies got their first three runs in the sixth off St. Louis starter Steve Carlton, who struck out 16 but wasn't involved in the decision. Larry Hise scored one with a triple and came home himself on Don Money's seventh home run, one more than Money hit all last year. Money, incidentally, was hit in the face below the right eye by a ground smash in the ninth inning St. Louis rally. He left the game and was taken to Temple University Hospital for X-Rays.

SHAVING STROKES

by Frank Beard

12-Putting Feel

The key to good putting is a sensitive feel. This starts in the grip. I would never tell a man to do anything a certain way. I'll recommend that you try my way, and if it doesn't work, then junk it and try something else until you find what is best for you. I use a standard reverse overlap grip to putt, but occasionally I will experiment with something else.

In the regular overlap grip, which I use for iron and wood shots, part of the right hand is off the club—the little finger and the area just below it. I go to a reverse overlap grip for putting because I want as much of my right hand as possible in contact with the club. You putt with your right hand; you get your putting feel in your right hand.

The left hand just guides the club. It acts as a fulcrum (I throw that word in for engineers out there). It keeps the stroke firm.

But your touch comes through your right hand. You should never get the club in the palm of your hand to putt. Hold it with the fingers

ATLANTA (AP)—There's an adage in the military service that goes something like this:

"I've got mine, buddy, how are you doing?"

In some respects, that seems to be the attitude between the "haves" and the "have-nots" on the pro golf tour. Or, more specifically, that's the attitude attributed to the "haves" by the "have-nots."

But it's not completely true. Not in every case.

Take Billy Casper, for example, one of the three million dollar winners on the pro tour. He's going out of his way to help young players, give them tips, help them with their game.

"Let's face it," he said, "we can't go on forever. The young players are the future of the game. I think we should do what we can to help them."

But many of the younger players, the ones who face the Monday qualifying rounds, feel they are being frozen out by the established stars of the game, feel they don't have a full chance at proving themselves on the lucrative, highly successful pro golf tour.

They have various points of contention. One of their major complaints concerns a proposal to establish a series of invitational-satellite tournaments with the qualifiers shunted to $35,000 events while the established players are competing in $100,000-up tournaments.

Another major bone of contention is the lifetime exemptions enjoyed by all former U.S. Open and PGA champions.

Some of these old guys get out there and claim a spot and they've got no more chance of making the cut than I have of flying," one player said.

Many players feel that there should be a time limit on the exemptions, five or 10 years. Still others suggest that the exemptions should extend only so long as the player remains active, playing in a certain number of events every year.

Two of the more interesting suggestions for changes to ease that situation have been made by Jack McGowan and Fred Marti.

McGowan envisioned a two-tour set-up split into leagues, while Marti suggested a new system of exemptions, but a much more stringent system.

"I don't think it's right that all open and PGA champions have lifetime passes," he said. "But I don't think it's right for a truly great player ever to have to qualify."

"The thing is, what's a great player? Arnold Palmer and Ben Hogan and Jack Nicklaus. Sure. But take some of your PGA champs. Dave Marr is a great player?"

Marti suggested a system of exemptions that includes some of the current standards, including the top money winners from the year before and the cut from the previous tournament.

But for lifetime exemptions, he would extend them only to (1) the top 10 players on the all-time money list and (2) players who have won 50 or more PGA co-sponsored tournaments.

"If a player is really great enough to deserve an exemption, he'll get it one way or the other. Hogan and (Sam) Snead qualify under the 50 tournaments rule. So does Palmer. And Casper and (Gary) Player and Nicklaus on the money list."

McGowan suggested a league arrangement.

"Split the players in two groups," he said, "on the basis of money. Like the No. 1, 3, 5, 7 money winners in one group and the 2, 4, 6 and 8 in the other group."

"Make the field 100 for every tournament with no qualifying. That gives you 200 players."

"Have one group play every other week. Then at the end of the year you could have a world series between the top four or six or eight or 16 in each group."

"Let the bottom 10 or 20 in each group drop off with new players taking their place, on the basis of a qualifying tournament. If a player who dropped off can make it the next year, fine."

Neither system is at all likely to be adopted, but both are indicative of tour players' thinking.

Their principal complaints are the lifetime exemptions enjoyed by national champions and the proposed invitational-satellite system.

"Somebody's going to complain no matter what system you have," said veteran Lionel Hebert.

Weld Seeks One of Six Spots Left

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — With time running out, several drivers ran speeds Thursday that put them in line for one of six spots still open in the starting field for the Indianapolis 500-mile race Memorial Day.

Final qualifying runs will be held Saturday and Sunday and most observers believe that a 4-lap speed of close to 164 miles an hour will be necessary to make the 33-car line-up.

"When the bumping begins Sunday," said rookie Greg Weld, 26, of Kansas City, "I want to be sitting on the board with at least 165 m.p.h. That's the only way I'll feel safe."

Weld, an 11-year racing veteran despite his youth, put himself solidly into contention with a lap at 164.554 m.p.h. in a Gerhardt - Turbocharged - Offenhauser, a companion car to the one Are Pollard qualified in the second row last Saturday.

Only the 33 fastest cars start the race, worth at least $800,000 in prize money. Twenty-seven cars qualified during the first two days of the trials last weekend. Their average speed was 167.038 m.p.h.

After the 33-car line-up is filled, other cars can still make the race by qualifying faster than the slowest car, bumping it from the line-up.

Rookie Steve Krisloff of Parsippany, N.J., was the slowest at 162.448 m.p.h. and

Orr, Esposito Lead Voting Of NHL Stars

MONTREAL (AP) — Bobby Orr, the Boston Bruins' 22-year-old defense star, has swept just about every award available to him this season.

But he has attained another mark today. This one is a whopping $17,750—a record for post-season earnings for a National Hockey League player.

Orr, along with rookie goaltender Tony Esposito of the Chicago Black Hawks, was a unanimous choice by National Hockey League Writers' Association members in the 12 league cities for first-team All-Star honors.

Selection to the first team carries a $2,000 prize while members of the second team are awarded $1,000 by the NHL.

Selected to the second team were:

Vandals Strike

John Bopp, the assistant green keeper at the Sedalia Country Club, reported to police Thursday that vandals placed a fuse flare in a cup on one of the holes on the golf course, burning the cup and the grass on the green, sometime Wednesday night.

Detective Sgt. Perry Franklin said the police have come up with some good leads in connection with the incident. Damage was estimated at $25.

would be the first bumped from the line-up.

Old pro Lloyd Ruby, victim of a series of engine failures that kept him out of the field, and a 3-time world driving champion, Jack Brabham, appeared to have a lock on two of the remaining spots.

Ruby was in the 169 m.p.h. range before his troubles began and is expected to be there again this weekend.

Brabham, shaking down a new car built especially for this race, got into the 166 m.p.h. bracket yesterday and appeared ready to go even faster.

Ron Bucknum, a 34-year-old sports car ace from Capistrano Beach, Calif., had a lap at 164.684. Rookie John Cannon of Montreal, and a 2-time Indianapolis starter, Sammy Sessions, Nashville, Mich., got into the 163 range.

Rookie Kevin Bartlett, former Australian Formula and sports car champ, and Billie Vukovich, son of the 2-time Indy winner, were caught in the 161 m.p.h. range.

"I'm ready to go under the clock now," said Weld. "The tension is getting next to all of us."

Title Fight Scheduled Saturday

UMAG, Yugoslavia (AP) — Less than 48 hours before world middleweight champion Nino Benvenuti of Italy squares off in a title fight against Tom Bethea of New York, the boxing arena still isn't finished.

Neither the promoters nor the fighters' managers were speculating on a postponement of the bout. Observers believed there was a good chance that barring unforeseen interruptions, the 60 workmen would complete the open-air arena in time.

Another problem was ticket sales for the 7,000-seat arena. Asked how sales were going, one ticket seller shook his head sadly and said, "Not too well."

More than 1,000 tickets, it was reported, remained unsold. Promoters were counting on a last-minute flurry of buying from Italians living in or near Trieste, Benvenuti's hometown.

The fight will be televised back to the United States via satellite and will be seen nationally on the Wide World of Sports, ABC, 5 p.m., EDT.

Organizational problems of the match did not appear to worry the boxers, both of whom declared themselves in top shape and confident of victory.

Bethea, 26, who has never before fought 15 rounds, said he was fully prepared to go the distance but did not think he would need 15 rounds to whip Benvenuti.

The American, who stopped Benvenuti on a technical knock-out in the eighth round of a non-title fight in Melbourne, Australia, in March, commented, "I have no special tactics to use. I'll just climb into the ring and punch him the whole match."

The 32-year-old Nino said he was in much better shape than he was for his loss in Melbourne, where he claimed Bethea had broken his rib.

N.A.S.C.A.R. Pilots Prepare For Long World 600 Outing

CHARLOTTE, N. C. (AP) — Cotton Owens is a grease surgeon. When he hoists an engine out of Buddy Baker's shovelled-out Dodge it's the mechanic's equivalent to a heart transplant.

"Our peak horsepower comes at 7,200 revolutions a minute," said Owens in his workshop tongue. "We've got to push over 200 miles an hour on the long straightaways and still be durable enough to last 500 or 600 miles."

Owens is a mite of a man. At 46, his hair is as yellow as oleo and there's a wrinkle in his tanned face for every wreck, every blown engine and for the times a 30-cent part has ruined his machine in a $100,000 race.

"If a car is set up right in the shop, most any good driver can win with it," said the Spartanburg, S. C., chief of Baker's stock car team. "If the car is set up poorly, the finest driver hasn't got a chance."

Owens is busy preparing the 426-cubic inch Dodge Daytona for the $193,080 World 600, to be run Sunday on Baker's favorite track. Not only does the husky 6-foot-5 Buddy live in Charlotte, but has pocketed $67,032 with two victories at the Charlotte Motor Speedway.

"Cotton's the boss in the garage and always gives me a good ride," said Baker. "Like he said, without a good crew a driver is skunked."

Nagel Gets Request

IOWA CITY, Iowa (AP) — Ray Nagel, ousted University of Iowa football coach, said Thursday he has been granted an appearance next Tuesday before the university's Board in Control of Athletics to argue for reconsideration of the board's action in firing him Tuesday.

"I can do nothing more except to wait for that meeting," Nagel said. "I feel some people have been misguided in this whole affair, and that they may be big enough to change their minds when they hear all the facts."

Nagel was relieved of his duties Tuesday at the same meeting during which the athletic board voted to accept the resignation of Athletic Director Forest Evashevski, both effective June 30.

The actions culminated a four-month feud between the two men which reportedly grew out of Evashevski's dissatisfaction with Nagel's conduct of the Iowa football program.

Several concerned groups, including the Hawkeye football squad, have asked the board to reconsider its action in firing Nagel.

Another group which asked reconsideration of Nagel's firing was the Iowa Football

Coaches Association, a group of high school coaches from across the state.

In a related development, Hawkeye coaches said some present and future players were having second thoughts about coming or returning to Iowa in the fall.

Evashevski held a news conference Thursday and told reporters he resigned because he didn't want to continue in the job. He also reiterated his recommendation that Chalmers "Bump" Elliott, assistant athletic director at the University of Michigan, should be named to the dual job of athletic director and football coach.

Evashevski said charges against him by Nagel read "like one big typographical error" and coupled his remarks with a plea that all parties cease the bickering that has rent the athletic department and turn their efforts to "picking up the pieces."

Owens was a great driver himself a few years ago. In 1950, he won an incredible 54 events, 24 in a row.

That's all in the past. Cotton, who turned 46 Thursday, knows his place is in the pits or in the garages around the NASCAR circuit.

Owens' garage in Spartanburg is stocked with $50,000 worth of tools to mold race cars, and he carries $8,000 worth to the nation's speedways.

Owens feels it takes $18,000 to build a race car. One smash into the speedway wall and the toll mounts.

"That happened to us Tuesday," frowned Owens. "Buddy hit the wall in practice and ruined the car. We sent down to my garage and got the backup Dodge and that's what we'll be running Sunday."

Another wrinkle for the groovy face of Everett "Cotton" Owens.

69 Film Shows Why Champs Are Great

By MURRAY OLDERMAN
KANSAS CITY (NEA) — At the very moment fullback Robert Holmes lunged to earth, on a soggy green spot in Tulane Stadium, while the clock high above was running down to 00:00, a comely young lady named Gerre Ann Sprague started pounding the back of His Honor, the mayor of Kansas City, Mo.

Lustily, so that His Honor, Ihus Davis, remembers the whacks, as well as the moment.

"Do you realize," squealed Gerre — wham! bam! — "the Chiefs are now champions of the whole wide world?"

Wince. Smile. Yes, the mayor realized it and still does more than four months later. If he needed to be reminded of the fact, NFL Films provided a memory jogger by perpetuating on film the galvanic scenes of that high achievement, the 21-7 Super Bowl triumph of the Kansas City Chiefs over the Minnesota Vikings.

His Honor, the mayor, and a select group from half a million Kansas Citians were privileged to relive the supreme moment at a mini-world premiere the other night that had everything from klieg lights to red carpets to steer-fed local high school belles in drum majorette minis.

The film, unfortunately, didn't show Gerre Ann physically anointing His Honor because all the cameras on that January afternoon in New Orleans were pointing toward the field. But Gerre Ann, who has a provincial interest in the Chiefs since she adorns one of their secretarial chairs, had an ample stand-in for conveying the spirit of the moment.

His name is Henry Stram, and he coaches the team from the sidelines, generally in a bright red vest and a shiny, slightly askew nose. Where Gerre Ann manages to bulge in conveniently appropriate spots, Henry seems to bulge all over. He looks more or less like a mobile beer keg but sacrifices nothing in animation.

For this Super Bowl, Ed and Steve Sabol, the pere-et-ils tandem which sets the tone for NFL Films, were able to convince Henry he should be bugged for the afternoon. The result is an amiable interplay of method acting and physical brutishness.

Mingled with scenes of the Chiefs knocking hell out of the Vikings on the field (the film's sure to get an X rating in Minneapolis and St. Paul) are cameos of Hank Stram audibly exhorting his red-shirted braves, chiding the referees, slapping players on their rumps, imparting the mumbo-jumbo of football strategy to quarterback Len Dawson and generally running all the emotional scales of a virtuoso performance.

"Let's matriculate down the field," he shouted in an early sequence, which gives you an idea of the script. Hank's role was so consuming that at the first official showing of the 26-minute film he was speechless.

His wife, Phyllis, the mother of his six children, wasn't fooled by his diffidence. "The kids and I," said Phyllis, "already saw the show once before, and we didn't see anything unusual in it. That's the way he always is — at home."

Now millions more can see — because of American Express TV distribution of the film — how Hank is. And how worthy the Kansas City Chiefs are.

"It's good," said Ihus Davis at the premiere, "to be mayor of the town that's got the best team in the whole world."

Gerre Ann Sprague nodded vigorously. His Honor beamed. She was sitting rows removed from his podium.

Two Tied For Early Golf Lead

ATLANTA (AP) — Homero Blancas, who scored his first PGA victory in four years last week, forged into a share of the opening round lead with a seven-under-par 65 Thursday in the $125,000 Atlanta Golf Classic and said, "I'll take three more just like it."

Blancas, who said "the adrenaline is still flowing" from his triumph in the Colonial National Invitation, shared the lead with tall Tom Weiskopf as the field of 144 ripped apart the 7,053-yard Atlanta Country Club course.

Fifty-six players carried below par scores into today's second round, hoping to make the cut for the final 36 holes Saturday and Sunday. Another 17 players shot par 72.

Blancas, the happy Mexican-American, said "I've got the momentum going."

Gibby Gilbert, a virtual unknown until his triumph at Houston two weeks ago, also had momentum going his way, shooting a 66.

"I'm playing better now than I did in Houston," Gilbert said. "Winning in Houston gave me confidence. I'm not afraid of the course anymore."

Blancas said he "putted extremely well but missed a few I misread. If I had gotten some of my makeable putts, I could have been two or three shots better."

Meanwhile, Weiskopf said, "That's the best putting round I ever had in my life. Everything I made today went right in the middle of the hole." He missed the green on the sixth and 12th holes, but had only 27 putts as he fashioned nine birdies and two bogeys.

Blancas had no bogeys in his round, slapping in birdie putts of eight feet or less on three holes on the front nine and then adding a pair of 25-foot birdie putts on the back side to go with two other birdies of shorter distance.

Gilbert eagled the 584-yard 11th to go five-under, but missed a three-footer on No. 12 that could have given him a share of the lead.

Several Ways to Clean Tarnished Copper Kettle

By POLLY CRAMER

DEAR POLLY and Anxious—I am an antique dealer and have had my fair share of copper to clean so think I have real help for the cleaning of that old copper preserving kettle. Submerge it in hot soapy water, remove, sprinkle with table salt and rub the surface with a slice of lemon until the copper shines through. Repeat treatments will be necessary if it is very tarnished. Once the surface is clean, the soft patina of the old copper will shine, so wash, rinse and then dry. I always keep a piece of lemon at hand for cleaning the copper bottoms of my cooking pans and this is far cheaper than buying commercial cleaners. If this treatment is used on brass great care must be taken to thoroughly wash and rinse to prevent pitting. Your column certainly cuts corners in my hectic schedule.—VIRGINIA

DEAR POLLY—Anxious wanted a cheap and easy way to clean an old copper preserving kettle. She can have this by spreading tomato catsup — yes, catsup — all over the copper and let it stand for about 15 minutes. Wash in warm suds and dry. If badly stained the kettle might require another such treatment. This works fine on copper bottom cooking pans and old wash boilers, too. The boilers make great magazine holders.—MRS. D. S.

DEAR POLLY—Do tell Anxious that to clean any copper article she can pour some vinegar in the kettle, sprinkle ordinary salt in the vinegar and rub with a cloth or sponge. It will clean up like magic. If especially stubborn, use a sponge that has a grit backing but, in average cases, this is not necessary. The proportion of salt to vinegar is not important. Just pour some vinegar and be generous with the salt. I think Anxious will be well-pleased with this and it certainly is economical. This Pointer was given me by an old-time candy maker who had to keep his copper kettles bright.—MRS. J. A. R.

DEAR GIRLS—If you ever have the misfortune to burn the bottom of a copper pan, use the catsup, then rub with steel wool. Apply more catsup and leave for 15 minutes with a paper towel over it. Then rub some more with steel wool. Repeat until the bottom is free of burns. It will be shiny and bright.—POLLY

Polly's Problem

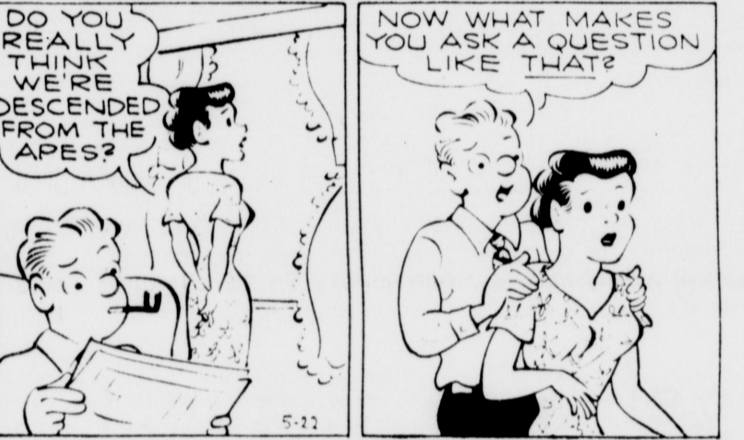

DEAR POLLY—I have several strings of pearls I would like to restring but am not sure how to make knots next to each pearl so each will be smooth and tight. Could any reader help me? If I qualify as a "problem" I would rather have your book than the Polly Dollar.—MRS. C. P.

Industrial Appreciation Week Set By Director

The Department of Industrial Development announced today that Sedalia's annual Industrial Appreciation Week will be held June 21-27.

Bill Hall, director of the department, said, "This is the time of the year when we give local industries an opportunity to publicly display products and manufacturing processes in display windows of local businesses. It is also a time when we remind the general public of the various products that are manufactured in Sedalia and show industry that we really appreciate their being here."

There are some 58 separate manufacturing processes in Sedalia, all of which play a vital and integral part in the city's economic system, Hall said. Over the past few years many of the industries have expanded, some through the help of Sedalia voters. Sedalia has been very fortunate to add several new industries, Hall said, with the greatest number coming in 1969 when six new industries came here.

Agreement By Laird On Troops

WASHINGTON (AP) — Secretary of Defense Melvin R. Laird said today South Vietnamese troops should be free to remain in Cambodia once the Americans pull out after June 30.

He said it would be unwise to fix any timetable for the withdrawal of the South Vietnamese.

Interviewed on NBC's Today show, Laird said he feels the South Vietnamese should be permitted to enter the Cambodia sanctuaries if the North Vietnamese attempt to rebuild them.

Laird repeated his pledge and that of President Nixon that every American soldier will be out of Cambodia by June 30. But he said he didn't think it would serve any useful purpose "to have a firm, fixed rule" against sending or leaving South Vietnamese troops in Cambodia.

Laird called the allied thrust into Cambodia by U.S. and South Vietnamese troops "a great tactical success." He said it exceeded expectations as far as the destruction of enemy supplies and captured food was concerned.

As for the strategic success of the operation which began April 30, Laird said that would have to be judged on the progress of our Vietnamization program and the decrease in U.S. casualties.

Various stores and other businesses in Sedalia are being contacted by Hall for display space.

Letters are also being sent to local industries with attached forms so that they may indicate their desire to have a display, along with first, second and third choice for preference of display space, he added.

The Annual Industrial Appreciation Banquet this year will be open to the public. The reception and banquet will be held at the Holiday Inn, at 6:30 p.m. on June 25. Advanced reservations must be made at the Industrial Development Office.

Long, Difficult Hours Preceded Decision

WASHINGTON (AP) — It is 9:45 on a warm Friday evening and the White House is swaddled in lights. Outside its gates, in restless procession, come the first of the thousands massing in the capital to proclaim dismay about Cambodia, Vietnam and Kent State.

Inside, wearing a blue suit and light television makeup, Richard Nixon waits in the Red Room, preparing to face reporters and a TV audience of 56 million in the 10th formal press conference of his presidency.

It is the events of the week, the welling up of dissent that followed his Cambodian decision, that prompted this news conference. Much has gone into Nixon's preparation for it.

At 10 p.m. Nixon strides into the glittering East Room, appearing tense and apprehensive. He knows that this night, the questions will be tough.

And they are, from the very start.

"Mr. President, have you been surprised by the intensity of the protest of YOUR decision to send troops into Cambodia... Mr. President, do you believe that YOU can open up meaningful communications with this college age generation and how... Mr. President, what do YOU think the students are trying to say?"

Nixon rocks forward slightly. He looks directly at his questioner, hands clasped tightly behind as though he were supporting himself on an invisible rail. His voice sounds husky and has a slight quaver.

The answers are fluent and the sentences parse. None of the questions surprise him. Each had been anticipated by his staff and posed in memos the President has been studying for two days.

Nixon is not at his best in small talk with strangers, but he's a pro when it comes to speeches and press conferences. He crams for them like a lawyer about to argue a case before the Supreme Court. The emphasis is on detailed planning.

Nixon chose to make his Cambodian decision known with a televised speech on April 30, and to respond to the criticism in the press conference on May 8.

How he went about it, provides a good insight into the workings of the 37th President. He began to think about the scope of the Cambodian speech, formulating ideas, on April 22 after meeting with the National Security Council.

"He called for option papers," says an aide. "That weekend he went to Camp David. Henry Kissinger flew there on Saturday with various options." Kissinger is the President's top assistant for security affairs.

On the presidential yacht the next day and later with the NSC, Nixon discussed the Cambodian situation again.

"The decision to execute was made on Tuesday the 28th," the aide says. "He had to make it then to get started on United States support for the South Vietnamese, to get troops deployed."

Once the decision had been reached, Nixon went into seclusion. In the Executive Office Building next door to the White House—in a large room filled with official gifts and various little elephant statues—the President started dictating into a machine, referring occasionally to a list of major points drawn up by Kissinger.

He'd sit there in a gold-cloth covered chair, feet up on an ottoman, tapping on the arms with his reading glasses, dictating, occasionally wandering across the street to work in the sunny rose garden.

This time, the yellow legal pads he prefers were used only for the changes he'd make as each successive draft was typed by Rose Mary Woods, his personal secretary.

She knows the way he likes to "see" a speech, and carefully puts each important phrase on a separate line.

"It was dictate, look, think, talk," says the aide. "On Wednesday he went to bed after midnight and got up at 5. He dictated awhile and went back to bed."

The draft he delivered that night was the eighth—and each word was his own. Nixon probably writes more of his own speeches than any president since Woodrow Wilson.

This is not to say that he hides his speechwriters, as Harry S. Truman did with Clark Clifford and Dwight Eisenhower with Bryce Harlow. But the biggest speeches of his life—the acceptance speech in Miami Beach and the inauguration speech—were pure Nixon.

William Safire, one of the three speechwriters, says Nixon is a considerate man to work for because he's a speechwriter himself. But he's also a bug on accuracy.

Safire saw the Cambodia speech a half hour before the President went on the air. In it was a reference that he was speaking from the room where Woodrow Wilson wrote of the "war to end wars."

"I'm a student on the derivation of political phrases," says Safire, who wrote a book on the subject. "I knew Wilson was closely associated with the phrase, but nobody ever saw him actually write it."

"Here the President was about to go on the air with an important speech and I remember this nitpicking item. I debated with myself for a minute, then went over to the Executive Office Building and said 'Excuse me, Mr. President. Probably nobody will notice, but we haven't been able to prove Wilson wrote that."

Nixon asked whether the text had been released. Safire said it had. The President said he would think about it.

When he got to that part on the air, Nixon changed the wording to "in this room, Woodrow Wilson made the great decisions which led to victory in World War I."

Not only is the President a good speechwriter, he's also a cool performer. Both cameras used for the Cambodia speech went on the blink just before air time.

In a few minutes, if this keeps up, we're going to do a radio show," TV advisor Roger Ailes told the President. Nixon laughed and asked, "Can anything else go wrong today?"

The speech started with one camera, and midway through the second came on. There was nothing to indicate production problems to the viewer.

Patrick Buchanan, who moonlights on some of Vice President Spiro Agnew's speeches, is considered the conservative on the Nixon speechwriting team and Pat Price is the liberal. Safire describes himself as "a centrist and opportunist."

"Sometimes the President will have the liberal do the conservative speech, sometimes the conservative will do the liberal speech," Safire says. On the welfare reform speech, a major point was to emphasize that, in order to receive federal money, a recipient would have to be willing to take a job or job training. That speech was handed to Buchanan, the conservative.

"We may give the President two pages and he'll use one line," Safire says. "I drafted the radio speech on inflation. He had said 'I want a speech for the housewives.' I sat down with Arthur F. Burns and Paul McCracken (the chairmen of the Federal Reserve Board and the Council of Economic Advisers) and wrote a speech. He said, 'That's not what I wanted,' and outlined what he did want."

The President, Safire says, always explains what, if anything, he finds wrong with a speech. "After a speech is over," Safire says, "I'll get two calls. One is from my mother, the other is from the President."

In preparing for news conferences, the speechwriters submit memos for the President on what questions are likely to be asked—and they are in question form, right down to the "Sir" that begins such questions. These memos also come from departments and agencies throughout the government and are finally drawn together by Buchanan.

With each question is the answer, taking less than one page. But never does the President answer exactly as it's put down.

In the May 8 news conference, for instance, Nixon was asked about unemployment hitting the 4.8 percentage point. Nixon answered, "In order to keep it in perspective, it should be noted that in 1961, 1962, 1963, 1964 and 1965 the average unemployment was 5.7." The figures had been researched in advance by the speechwriters, but the President rephrased and expanded on the memo.

The President got a laugh from his audience—and joined in himself—when he was asked about the now-famous letter from Interior Secretary Walter Hickel. Nixon mentioned he had picked Hickel because he was outspoken and courageous and added that the leaked letter "was the fastest mail delivery I have had since I have been in the White House."

Business Mirror

Many Avenues Are Open To America's Economy

NEW YORK (AP) — Consumers, capital and Cambodia are the three major determinants of where the American economy goes from here. Among the directions it can take at this juncture are recession, stability, inflation, expansion or some combination.

The importance of consumer sentiment is based not only on such hard statistical evidence as the growing rate of joblessness, but on a possible pessimistic turn in consumer psychology.

Past studies have shown that consumer buying moods are based not only on the ability to buy—as measured by jobs, payrolls and savings—but on less obvious influences, such as hope or discouragement over the Indochina war.

While it has been government policy to dampen the spending desires of consumers, some economists now are concerned that an overflow of bad news might drown out all but utterly essential spending.

Pessimism is widespread throughout the financial world, evidence of which is reported daily in stock market reports, and it has persisted so long now that the contagion could spread to consumer sales. A sharp drop in retail sales would signal the arrival of a recessionary psychology, or the development of an overly cautious attitude toward the future, marked by more enthusiasm for conserving than for construction expansion.

The capital situation involves an upcoming tug-o-war for Nixon had made that crack earlier and the memo-writers picked it up, incorporating it in their briefing forms.

The President flew to Camp David with the memos the day before the news conference and stayed there until a few hours before air time. His aides all agree that he has a memory that approaches the photographic. If he's given a five-point answer, he remembers all five points.

Such homework stands him in good stead. But every once in a while, even a corporation lawyer gets caught with his memory down.

On the presidential campaign, Nixon was in the Midwest, fielding questions and honing the stand-up-without-rostrum technique he uses as President.

"How do you feel about fire ants?" a would-be supporter asked him. "You got me there," the candidate replied.

funds that could push interest rates even higher than they are now. Industry has enormous spending plans; the economy does not have the funds for them to use.

Some corporations already are beginning to scrap these expansion plans because of the money shortage or because they are unwilling to pay high rates. But others may be in the game until the rope breaks.

If the demand persists, the resulting snap would be felt throughout the economy. Corporate treasurers vividly remember that back in late 1966 they had to scramble wildly for funds to finance projects to which they were committed.

Assume, however, that the inability to finance will cause corporations to simply drop their expansion plans far enough ahead to avoid being caught in such a bind.

Will massive scrapping of plans push interest rates higher? The experts are divided. Perhaps neither extreme will result. Perhaps the forces will balance each other out.

The Cambodian problem is as difficult to analyze as the others, especially for those who try to read meaning into the stock market. Unable to develop any inside information on the war, stock analysis is this: If the war spreads it is bad for the stock market; if the Cambodian maneuver eventually reduces the conflict, the market will rise.

Develop Your Child's Creativity—V.

Learning to Use Words is the First Step

By Thomas J. and Alice Fleming

Does your child repeatedly get A's in his English compositions? Or is he the C student? Maybe—and more likely—he is somewhere in between. But whatever category he belongs to, it isn't safe to assume anything about his abilities as a writer without first investigating the kind of instruction he is receiving in school.

Because English is a required course in our elementary and high schools, few parents give much thought to developing their children's writing skills. If a child has talent, they reason, it is bound to be discerned and nurtured by his teachers.

This is not necessarily true. Although some schools offer excellent instruction in English composition, in many more the courses are barely adequate. Too often teachers place most of their emphasis on the mechanics of writing when they should be helping their students to develop ideas and to write about them with precision and grace. At the grammar school level, precedence may be given to spelling, punctuation and grammar instead of originality and spontaneity of expression. (This is not to imply that such matters are unimportant but simply to point out that they should never be the sole criteria in judging a piece of writing.) In high school, a student may have no better chance to learn the art of good writing.

Books Are Vital
The way to begin developing good writing is with good reading. A child's interest in reading can begin long before he enters school. Books make excellent gifts from the toddler stage on and reading aloud is a delightful experience that parents and children can share. It is, in addition, an excellent introduction to the instruction a youngster will receive later on in school.

As a child's reading skills develop, provide him with books that are appropriate to his age and interests. See that he has a library card and a quiet corner to sit in and don't be upset if he doesn't take to the classics right away. It takes a while for tastes to develop and mature. When children get their fill of Superman comics or Nancy Drew mysteries, they graduate to higher levels of reading.

Sometimes children grow up surrounded by books, yet it never occurs to their parents to provide them with opportunities to write as well as to read. Give a child a diary or notebook and advise him to use it not just to keep a record of daily happenings, but as a place to write down his inner thoughts and feelings. Another excellent gift for the would-be writer is a typewriter (and a manual of practice lessons to go with it). Typing not only makes the writing process go faster but time and again teachers report that youngsters who type their essays and compositions tend to write at greater length and with more facility.

No Baby Talk
Many parents are only dimly aware of how to introduce their children to the power and magic of words. They may buy a dictionary, urge the youngster to use it and think that the job is done. But children must also learn to use these words effectively when they write and speak.

Once a child has graduated from single words and phrases to simple sentences, he will quickly pick up the speech patterns and vocabularies of his parents. For this reason, adults should avoid tailoring their language to a juvenile level. It is never a good idea to talk down to children. In most cases, they're fascinated by new words and expressions. They quickly discern the meaning of even fairly complicated words and start using them themselves.

Another good way to give a child a feeling for the sound and meaning of words is by reading or reciting poetry to him. The poems of Robert Louis Stevenson and A.A. Milne are long time favorites but children also enjoy a surprising variety of other authors from Edward Lear and Ogden Nash to Shakespeare and William Blake.

Not every child who writes well is going to grow up to be a poet, novelist or playwright. But there are dozens of other careers open to the person who has a way with words. Good

HOW CREATIVE IS YOUR HOME?

The environment in which your child lives has a strong influence upon his creative abilities. To help evaluate the creative potential in your home, answer the questions. The scoring guide appears below.

1. A. Check the activities your family enjoys regularly.
- a. Games (such as charades, Monopoly, etc.)
 - b. Sports
 - c. Conversation
 - d. Television
 - e. Independent activities (such as hobbies, scouting, etc.)

- 1.B. Check the places or events which you and your family visited last year.

- a. Museum or gallery
- b. Circus
- c. Zoo
- d. Park or campground
- e. Movies
- f. Stage play
- g. Lecture
- h. Sports event
- i. Concert

2. A. How creative do you think you are? Rate yourselves along this scale, where 1 is "non-creative" and 7 is "very creative". Circle the most appropriate number for each parent.

	non creative	1	2	3	4	5	6	7	very creative
MOTHER
FATHER

- 2.B. What are your artistic skills? Check those areas appropriate for Mother and Father.

- a. Writing
- b. Design (such as interior decorating, architecture, etc.)
- c. Painting, sculpting
- d. Music (includes voice and instrumental)
- e. Drama
- f. Handicraft (such as carpentry, leatherwork, etc.)
- g. Photography

3. Rate yourselves along this scale in terms of how you discipline your child. 1 is "very lenient" and 7, "very strict". Circle the most appropriate number for Mother and for Father.

	very lenient	1	2	3	4	5	6	7	very strict
MOTHER
FATHER

4. A. Which would you rather your child achieved? Check one for each parent.

- a. superior grades
- b. popularity
- c. a unique talent

- 4.B. Which set of three traits from those below would you value most in your child? Check one set for each parent.

- a. obedient, dependent, conscientious
- b. curious, autonomous, sense of humor
- c. friendly, quiet, satisfied

5. About how many books do you read in a year? Check one category under Mother and one under Father.

- a. under 10
- b. 10 to 30
- c. 30 to 50

SCORING GUIDE

Question 1: Diversity of Experience

Total the number of checked items in question 1, both A and B. Then find where you fit below.

0-3 (items checked): Limited. May slow your child's creative development.

4-7: Needs diversity of experience.

8-11: Good. Should help the child's creative thought.

12 or more: Excellent. Keep up the good work!

Question 2: Parents' Creativity

A. If you are highly creative, home environment will probably enhance the child's creativity. Most people are somewhere between "non-creative" and "very creative."

B. If you have checked one artistic skill, your interest may facilitate the development of your child's creativity; more than one skill—good.

Question 3: Discipline

Very strict discipline limits your child's curiosity and creativity. Too much leniency may not provide enough guidance. The middle ground is best.

Question 4: Parental Expectations

A. Too constant pushing in one direction may inhibit the behavior you wish to promote. The healthy objective: well-rounded development.

B. The traits in set 'b' characterize the creative person; those in 'a' and 'c' are not "bad," but will not directly promote creativity; those in 'a' may discourage it.

Question 5: Intellectual Stimulation

The more intellectually stimulated you are, the more likely that your child will adopt your love of learning and knowledge.

speechwriters are already in demand by businessmen and politicians as well as other people in public life. Think, too, of the many other things besides speeches that need television and movie scripts, advertising copy, news broadcasts, text and reference books, brochures and pamphlets. Writing skills can also be a valuable adjunct to other disciplines. Teachers, doctors, lawyers, even corporation executives are likely to have the same experience.

Guidelines to Writing

Parents who would like to be able to identify and nurture writing talent in their children are sometimes baffled about where to begin. For those of you who are wondering what to look for and encourage. Dr. Frank B. May has drawn up the following set of criteria:

1. Imagery — describing a situation or subject in vivid colorful, concrete language.

2. Naturalness — using informal language (except on those rare occasions when formality is expected); maintaining personal contact with listeners or readers, expressing one's individuality.

3. Inventiveness — inventing fresh analogies, characters, settings, plots, or words; playing with homonyms, alliteration, and other humorous devices.

4. Insight — portraying human strengths and weaknesses by means of satire, humorous incongruity, philosophical generalization, realistic description, and other devices.

5. Sincerity — demonstrating keen interest or feeling regarding one's subject, story, or characters.

6. Flexible style — avoiding monotony by altering sentence length, clause position, sentence type, and other elements of style.

7. Conciseness — expressing the essence of an idea or situation; avoiding words and details which distract from the main ideas or impressions to be conveyed.

8. Clarity — avoiding pronouns with hazy referents.

dangling participles, slang or jargon, mystic phrases, and other habits of speech which are likely to confuse listeners or readers.

Learning by Writing

These are not intended as strict rules but simply as guidelines which adults can use in assessing a school child's ability with words. Above all, the child who shows a flair for writing should be encouraged to write—jottings in a diary, letters to friends, articles for the school paper, poetry or short stories for his own amusement.

One important thing that children who like to write or who aspire to making writing a career should know is that writing is hard work. They may be encouraged to know that professional writers usually feel the same way. Not many writers dash off their stories or articles at the first crack. There are many corrections and long hours of rewriting before a satisfactory version finally emerges.

But, of course, few worthwhile things do come easily.

Asks for $500 Million

Funds For Desegregation Are Sought From Congress

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Nixon asked Congress Thursday for $500 million to promote school desegregation and interracial education experiments North and South during the next academic year.

The President's Emergency School Aid Act of 1970 calls for speedy appropriation, hopefully within the next few weeks, of $150 million as startup money. A request for $350 million more in fiscal 1971 will follow enactment of additional authorizing legislation, he said.

White House officials said the bulk of funds will go for integration and a "very low amount" for compensatory programs in segregated schools.

The legislation and message to Congress clarifies the President's earlier announcement of the fund in his March 24 school desegregation statement. Some $1 billion will be asked for fiscal 1972, he said.

The legislation specifies the aid can be used for busing that breaks up formerly de jure or legally segregated systems in the South and furthers voluntary school integration programs anywhere in the country.

But, according to the President, it can't be used solely to promote forced racial balance in schools—that is, busing whose sole purpose is to eliminate Northern-style or de facto segregation without regard to educational benefit.

This distinction between forced busing solely for racial balance and voluntary busing was not clearly defined, however, in either the message or the legislation.

One-third of the fund will be reserved for discretionary use by the secretary of health, education and welfare on experiments he deems particularly meritorious.

The remaining two-thirds will be allocated to states on the basis of their numbers of minority-group children. But individual projects must be approved by the Welfare Department. And each state will receive a minimum of $100,000 in fiscal 1971.

Minority pupils in Southern districts now desegregating or soon to desegregate will count double in the formula. According to administration officials, this will result in some 60 per cent of the first $500 million going to the 17 Southern and border states.

House Votes to Increase Social Security Payments

WASHINGTON (AP) — The House voted Thursday for a 5 per cent increase in Social Security payments, along with a surprise bonus of future cost-of-living increases.

A Republican-sponsored move to add the cost-of-living feature, starting in 1973, swept through the House at the last minute, 233 to 144. Then the bill passed 343 to 32.

The bill which now goes to the Senate, calls for increasing next year the wage base on which Social Security taxes are levied from $7,800 to $9,000—meaning added taxes for all earning more than $7,800. The extra cost-of-living feature would entail more increases in the future.

Rep. Wilbur D. Mills, D-Ark., chairman of the Ways and Means Committee, told the House the wage base might be $22,900 by 1990 if the provision remains in the law.

The first changes, the 5 per cent increase and the $9,000 base, will go into effect Jan. 1, if the Senate concurs with the House action.

These and other liberalizations in the measure would pump out more than $2 billion additional benefits of various kinds, while the initial tax increase would raise $2.5 billion.

Under terms of the bill, the average single retired person next year would receive $121.80 a month instead of $116; the average couple $205.80 instead of $196.

The first cost-of-living adjustment would come in 1973 if prices continue to rise.

The maximum Social Security tax paid by an employed person would rise from $374.40 to $468 next year. The increase reflects both the raise and a four-tenths of one per cent tax rate increase already built into the law.

The measure also includes provisions intended to check the soaring cost of Medicare, Medicaid and other government-assisted health programs.

One of these would be the first statutory standards for doctors' payments. These would be based on the rates prevailing among three-fourths of the doctors of the community, eliminating the highest-charging quarter.

The secretary of health, education and welfare would be directed to work out ways of shifting hospital payments to a basis of charges determined in advance.

Moreover, the bill would provide shifts in the federal contribution to Medicaid programs for the poor and near-poor so as to discourage long stays in expensive nursing homes and encourage use of outpatient and home care facilities.

In addition to the across-the-board benefit increases, the legislation provides higher payments for widows, opportunity for retired persons to earn more without having their pensions cut, and a better break for men who retire early.

WEATHER

It will be clear to partly cloudy and continued warm through Saturday with a chance for afternoon and evening thunderstorms. The low tonight will be in the upper 50s to the mid 60s. The high Saturday will be in the mid to upper 80s. The wind will be southerly 8 to 15 mph.

Lake of the Ozark stage: 56.7 feet; 3.3 feet below full reservoir.

The sun will set tonight at 8:24 p.m. and will rise at 5:55 a.m. tomorrow.

Randall To Help In Remap

Rep. William Randall, D-Mo., told the Pettis County Court Thursday that he would provide a breakdown on the county's population by townships as soon as possible to help speed redistricting efforts.

In a letter to presiding judge Henry Lamm, Randall said, "We cannot predict if these will be available yet, but I have contacted the Census Bureau to explain your needs. Hopefully, if they haven't gotten this far along in their final tabulation they can at least give you some timetable as to when the breakdown by township will be available."

At a hearing in Circuit Court last week, Judge Frank Hayes heard testimony by area realtors who filed the initial complaint for redistricting, citing uneven distribution of inhabitants in the Eastern and Western districts of the county.

Judge Hayes took the case under advisement until the County Court could redistrict the county according to the 1970 census.

Redistricting would probably affect the boundaries of some of the townships in the county, Lamm said, and will definitely give the county two more evenly-divided districts. Presently, based on the 1960 census, 8,081 people live in the Western district and 27,039 reside in the Eastern district.

Randall called the redistricting "long overdue."

American Legion Post 16 volunteers will be canvassing the downtown Sedalia area Friday and Saturday selling poppies to help disabled American war veterans.

Accident Is Fatal To Youth

Sedalia recorded its third traffic fatality of the year Thursday morning following a truck-motorcycle accident at Fifth and Sunset Drive at 8:53 a.m.

Gregory Barnell Smith, 18, 507 State Fair, the driver of an eastbound 1969 Suzuki motorcycle, died at Bothwell Hospital at 10:35 a.m. as the result of injuries he sustained in the collision.

According to police, the accident occurred as Ray Emil Vogel, 21, Route 2, was backing his 1965 GMC truck onto Fifth.

Vogel told police he started backing up and saw the cycle coming. He stated Smith was looking back over his shoulder at the time. Vogel said he tried to get the truck out of the way, but couldn't get it into a forward gear in time. The cycle collided with the left rear corner of the truck.

Smith sustained a crushed breastbone when he was thrown against the bed of the truck. His cycle struck the frame of the truck, under its bed.

Smith was born, June 10, 1951, in Sedalia, son of Mr. and Mrs. E. B. Smith. He was a senior at Smith-Cotton High School and would have graduated May 27.

Surviving besides his parents, are two brothers, Terry, a student at Central Missouri State College; Jeff, of the

Woodcock Is Assured Presidency

DETROIT (AP) — Leonard Woodcock's election to the presidency of the United Auto Workers, succeeding the late Walter P. Reuther, was assured Thursday with the withdrawal of the only other candidate.

Woodcock, 59, is not expected to change the UAW's policies or the demands it will make later this year in contract negotiations with the automotive and agricultural implement industries.

Douglas A. Fraser, like Woodcock a UAW vice president, said in withdrawing: "There is no division in ranks. We will go to the bargaining table united as never before. The difference will be in style, not philosophy."

The 25-member International Executive Board will name Reuther's successor Friday to serve until the union's 1972 convention.

Fraser said 13 executive board members had expressed favor for Woodcock in private conferences with Secretary-Treasurer Emil Mazey, who has been acting president since Reuther's death in an airplane crash May 9. Fraser said 12 had favored him.

Says Notice of Assault Was Withheld Two Days

WASHINGTON (AP) — Sen. Albert Gore said Thursday President Nixon told leaders of veterans and retired officer groups of U.S. plans to attack Communist sanctuaries in Cambodia two days before he disclosed the assault to Congress and the nation. He called it shocking.

The Tennessee Democrat said the same information "was being withheld from the Senate by no less a personage" than Secretary of State William P. Rogers.

Gore's attack on the Senate floor was based on a letter dated May 13 by retired Vice Adm. W. R. Smedberg III, president of the retired Officers Association, and a press briefing last week by Secretary of Defense Melvin R. Laird.

At that session, according to a transcript Gore placed in the Congressional Record, Laird said U.S. planning for the Cambodian attack began after the overthrow in March of Chief of State Norodom Sihanouk, more than one month before the attack actually took place.

Referring to the Smedberg letter, Gore told the Senate:

"This letter, if correct, indicates that the decision was being discussed with sundry private citizens while the information with respect to it was being withheld from the Senate by no less a personage than the secretary of state himself."

Sen. Charles H. Percy, R-Ill., said "If the South Vietnamese Army is strong enough to fight in Vietnam and Cambodia at the same time, we should now be able to increase substantially the pace of U.S. troops withdrawals from Vietnam."

NEWS IN BRIEF

WASHINGTON (AP) — The allied thrust into Cambodia has forced the North Vietnamese to move their elusive headquarters beyond the 21-mile striking distance permitted U.S. ground troops, a Pentagon spokesman said Thursday.

NEW YORK (AP) — The ailing stock market declined sharply for the third consecutive session Thursday in some of the heaviest trading this year. The Dow Jones average of 30 industrial stocks plunged 11.30 to 665.25. The average has not been as low since March 1, 1963.

WASHINGTON (AP) — Senate offices are being flooded with mail opposing President Nixon's move into Cambodia but some Republicans report a trend in recent days toward backing the administration.

Differences Remain Unsettled

KASSEL, Germany (AP) — West German Chancellor Willy Brandt and East German Premier Willi Stoph failed to settle basic differences between their two regimes in summit talks that ended here Thursday night.

A West German spokesman said the two leaders—meeting for the second time in an unprecedented East-West dialogue—set no date for a third round.

West German government spokesman Conrad Ahlers told a news conference the door was still left open, however, for further talks at the same level later.

He said it would take "considerable time" before this could be expected.

But he stressed that technical talks which have been under way between East and West German officials would continue.

These talks deal with matters such as postal, traffic and trade exchanges between the two German states.

An atmosphere of tension and inflexibility had dimmed hopes of progress as the talks got under way at this town 50 miles inside West Germany.

Brandt submitted a 20-point proposal calling for the establishment of relations that stopped just short of full diplomatic recognition of the East German regime.

Stoph stood fast, however, behind East Germany's demand for full recognition by Bonn.

"It would be of little use and bypass the essence of the matter if... authorized representatives were charged to discuss... matters of secondary or tertiary importance..." the East German leader declared.

Stoph's temper began to rise after a series of incidents climaxed when thousands of demonstrators from both left and right forced him to cancel plans to lay a wreath at Kassel's memorial to victims of fascism.

The East German premier issued an angry statement accusing Brandt of breaking his pledge to guarantee full security for the East German delegation, which included Foreign Minister Otto Winzer.

Despite the presence of several hundred police around the memorial, about 6,000 scuffling demonstrators barred access to the area. Authorities finally ruled that Stoph's safety could not be guaranteed.

The crowds included West German Communists waving red flags and calling for approval of Stoph's demands for diplomatic recognition. There were also rightist elements who scuffled with the leftists.

American Battle Count Hits High of 217 Dead

SAIGON (AP) — American combat deaths last week totaled 217, the highest in nine months, the U.S. Command said Thursday. Informed sources said 77 of the Americans were killed in Cambodia.

While American battle deaths were increasing 29 per cent over the previous week, the number of South Vietnamese and enemy troops killed in action fell off.

The South Vietnamese headquarters reported 553 government troops killed, compared with 863 the week before. The two headquarters said enemy battle deaths were 3,737, down from 5,993 the previous week.

There was no explanation of why U.S. casualties rose while those of the South and North Vietnamese and the Viet Cong fell.

The South Vietnamese command said, however, that enemy activity inside the country declined by 40 per cent last week.

The U.S. death toll was the highest since the week of Aug. 10-16, when 244 Americans were killed in action.

The U.S. Command reported 166 Americans have been killed and 677 wounded in Cambodia since the first operation opened April 29. South Vietnamese headquarters said 591 government troops were killed and 2,042 were wounded in Cambodia. The allies claimed 8,433 enemy troops were killed in Cambodian battles.

Thousands of South Vietnamese troops who began a new operation Wednesday against the last known enemy border sanctuaries in Cambodia reported they encountered little resistance as they searched for bases about 125 miles northeast of Saigon.

Southwest of this operation, American troops in the Fishhook region of Cambodia reported seizing tons of medical supplies, nine trucks and 75 rifles.

In southeast Cambodia, a powerful South Vietnamese force reported it killed 39 North Vietnamese and Viet Cong soldiers in two clashes and captured more than 100 tons of arms and ammunition. South Vietnamese casualties were given as 11 killed and 35 wounded.

There were no reports of renewed fighting between Cambodian troops and enemy forces.

Only light contacts were reported in South Vietnam, but the enemy shelled 54 U.S. and South Vietnamese positions overnight. Reports said 13 Americans and 12 Vietnamese were wounded but damage was slight.

This was the third day in a row that the enemy had hit more than 50 bases and towns with mortars and rockets. This high point of enemy activity was believed timed to coincide with the anniversary of the birth of the late Ho Chi Minh, president of North Vietnam.

The latest casualty summaries showed 1,281 Americans and 1,470 South Vietnamese were wounded last week.

EDITORIALS

Shave and a Haircut

Some of the young, long-haired, sincere anti-war exponents who have no part in violence during demonstrations are becoming aware at last that their image is not reflecting what they expected from the public in support of their peaceful purposes. So many youngsters are again becoming acquainted with the barbers and exchanging freakish attire for more conservative habiliments.

As a result they are finding greater acceptance among important legislators with whom they desire dialogue for support of their opinions and enabling legislation.

If this is a national trend it can become significant during an election year.

Another matter more rational liberals should consider is a movement among themselves to disavow the neurotic elements with whom they have been associated, the minority types who promote and participate in violent destruction of physical properties. The rationals are overwhelmingly in the majority and if they have the will to do so can tell the radical revolutionaries, "in association with us violence is not tolerated."

Similarly this attitude could be enforced against minority groups of weirdies who as hangers on at demonstrations do disservice to legitimate protesters. What in the name of common sense can these mentally unbalanced persons do to any worthy cause? We refer particularly to those young persons who participated recently in the Washington demonstration, and were pictured in the May 18 issue of Time magazine. While police looked on benignly nine naked young men and women splashed around in the Washington reflecting pool not far from the White House. Others were bare-waisted on the edge. Another picture was of a girl and boy dripping themselves with animal blood as they paraded down the street. This is symbolic of a demand for and end to war!!

Although they were not interrupted by the police during a mixed nude bathing party in broad daylight in the center of the national capital, these are the same blithe spirits who turn around and complain that our society is more and more repressive.

If this represents progress in a civilized society then its a peculiar kind that can do nothing but widen the so-called generation gap about which we hear so much talk from the young folks these days.

Come on, fellows, get a shave and a haircut; and girls put on your bras, cut out all this repugnant silliness and get on with the legitimate business of sane and effective protest against all those things that are retarding the world from becoming a better place in which to live.

Washington Merry-Go-Round

Disarmament Into Retardation

WASHINGTON — President Nixon's press conference prediction that there would be a Soviet-American agreement to limit strategic weapons was apparently a bit premature.

Both sides have acknowledged that an escalation of the arms race not only would make this planet a more dangerous place to live but would pile more millions upon the already oppressive financial burden of both nations. Yet the escalation is going on, inexorably, as if it were an irresistible force of nature.

At a recent diplomatic soiree in Moscow, a Soviet official passed pleasant-ries with an American diplomat. Suddenly, the Russian began speaking intently, nervously pressing his fingertips together. He wanted the American to know, he said, that enlightened Soviet leaders desired a strategic arms agreement but that they were hampered by the Defense Ministry.

Variations of this scene have been repeated at least two dozen times during the past few weeks. Soviet diplomats have taken aside Americans at cocktail parties and have stopped them in corridors to whisper that the Soviet military are obstructing the SALT talks in Vienna.

—Pentagon's Influence—
The Americans might have responded that the Pentagon has had a similar influence upon the U.S. negotiators, who have been unable to make a proposal until it has been thoroughly reviewed by the brass. In the backrooms, the generals have fought every concession.

They have persuaded the President, for example, to go ahead with installing multiple warheads next month on our intercontinental missiles. Yet the deployment of multiple-headed missiles is the main question that is supposed to be settled in Vienna.

Similarly, the Soviet military have pushed ahead with the testing of multiple warheads and the installation of SS9 missiles. These monsters pack a devastating, 20-megaton wallop capable of knocking out our own hardened, underground missile sites.

At the same time that the negotiators were discussing arms control in Vienna, the Soviet Navy also conducted provocative, world-wide maneuvers under the code name, "Okean."

In the Pacific, for example, U.S. naval forces have teletyped and radioed in code a staccato of submarine sightings. The list of Russian subs, prowling the sea aortas leading from the U.S. to Vietnam, has now reached 120. Of these, 35 are known to be nuclear powered and 25 are armed with 400-mile missiles.

—Intelligence Report—
An intelligence summary, slipped to this column, declares that the Soviet subs operate out of the Siberian ports of Vladivostok and Petropavlovsk.

"This force," states the summary, "has significant capabilities including torpedo attack, cruise missile and ballistic missiles with the ability to operate anywhere in the Pacific."

The intelligence report also describes a Soviet surface fleet of "five cruisers, including guided missile cruisers; 25 destroyers, about half of which are guided-missile equipped; and 25 ocean escorts. Its guided-missile patrol boat force, of about 60 units, is the largest of any of the four (Soviet) fleets, and its amphibians and naval auxiliary forces are second in size only to those in the Baltic and Northern fleets, respectively."

Another intelligence report declares ominously that "the Soviets have recently placed mooring buoys" in the Philippine Sea, which has been dominated by the U.S. Fleet since Admiral Dewey destroyed the Spanish fleet in 1898.

Meanwhile, the negotiators in Vienna are trying desperately to stop the military spending spiral by trading off a U.S. advantage for a Soviet advantage. What the military men are doing, however, seems to counter what the negotiators are saying. Thus, the chances that President Nixon's prediction will come true are now rated less than 50-50.

Footnote: My associate Les Whitten reports from Hong Kong that U.S. naval forces in the Pacific are spread thin. He quotes Japanese authorities as saying that "a comparatively small U.S. Navy force" now calls at the giant Yokosuka naval base south of Tokyo.

—Cuban Airlift Challenged—
Rep. Bill Clay, D-Mo., will write President Nixon next week urging him to terminate the Cuban airlift, which brings about 1,000 refugees into this country each week.

Clay's opposition to the refugee airlift is based upon a private staff memo which charges that it "constitutes an outright subsidization of the Cuban government welfare program."

"This policy of accepting and bearing the expense of those who are either unwanted, unneeded, or uncomfortable within the confines of their country has no basis," declares the memo. "We are trying to solve the social problems of a enemy nation."

The airlift was begun by President Johnson in 1965 to offer safe, quick passage for a stream of refugees who had been trying to get out of Cuba since Fidel Castro seized control in 1959.

About 190,000 Cubans have been brought to this country by the airlift. When they arrive, a number of volunteer agencies help them to obtain transportation to the place of their choice and housing after they get there.

Most of the expense is borne by the taxpayers who spent $87 million last year on the entire refugee program. The budget request for the next fiscal year is $112 million.

Clay's staff study charges that "the refugees coming to America now are not fleeing the country in opposition to Castro on the basis of ideology. We are admitting the lame, the aged, the blind, the unemployables, as well as the able-bodied unemployed of Cuba."

The study says that 50,000 Cubans are now receiving U.S. welfare and their presence in many areas creates "fierce and often bitter competition for jobs."

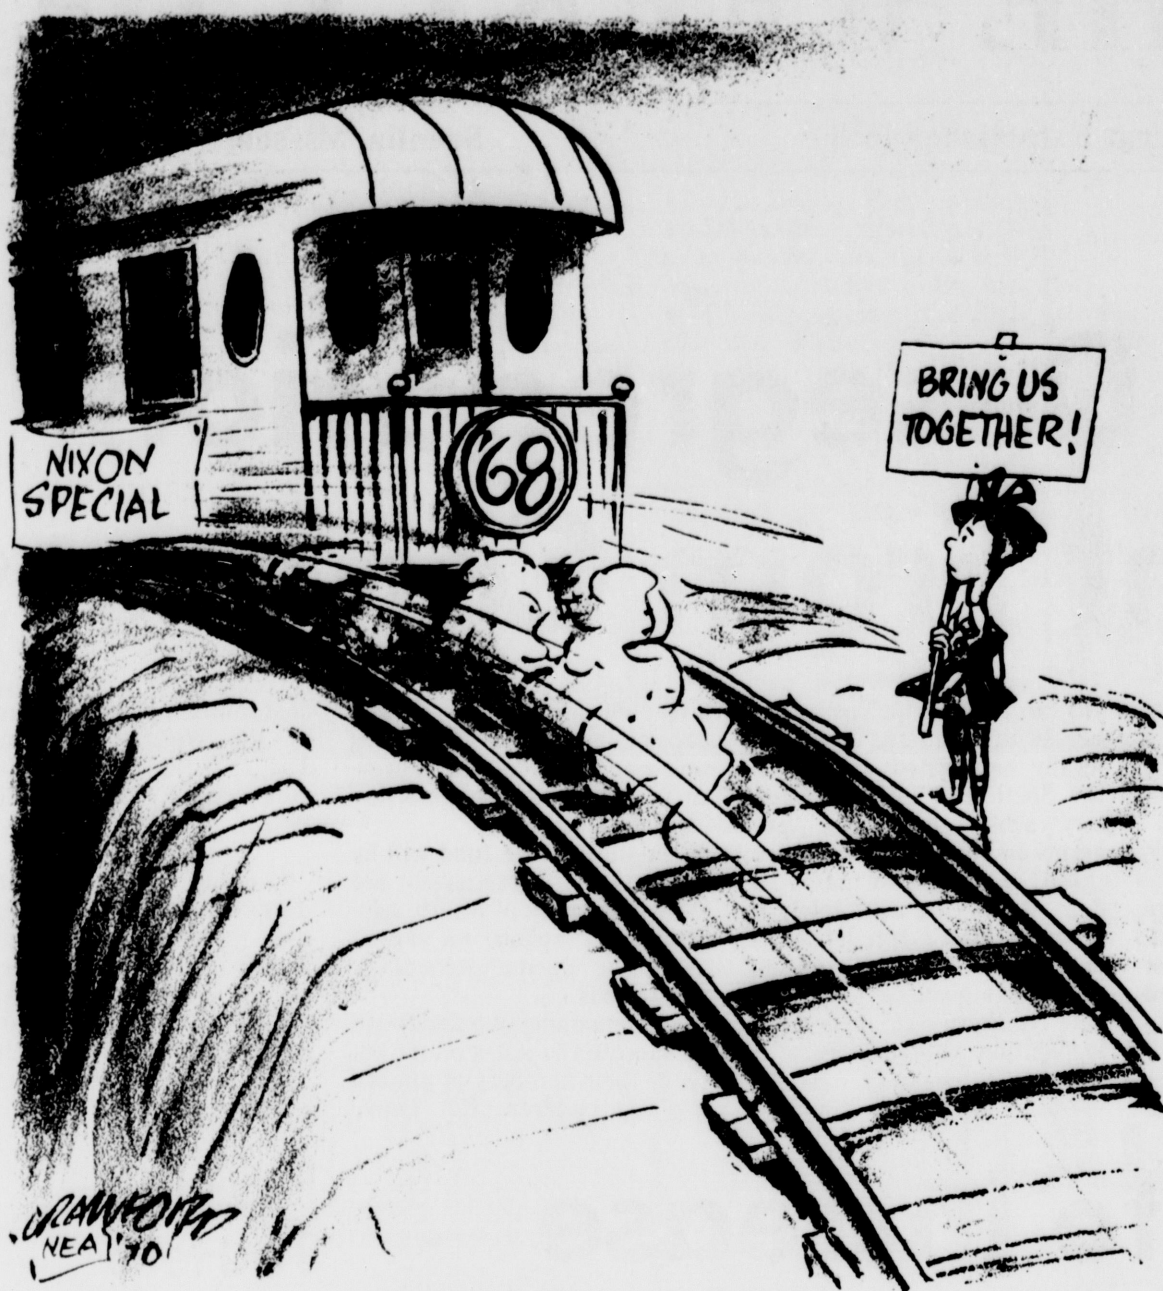

The officials who are running the Cuban refugee program, however, say that the program is intended only to reunite families divided by the Castro revolution. While immediate family members have priority, the officials admitted that aunts, uncles, cousins and other relatives are considered eligible to be brought here by airlift.

All refugees now coming in signed up to leave Cuba before May 1, 1966. About 73,000 persons are believed to remain on the list. They are subject to reprisal and would be left at Castro's mercy if they aren't permitted to come to this country, say the officials.

What Ever Happened to that Little Girl?

A Softer Soviet Tone on Mideast

By LEON DENNEN
Foreign News Analyst

UNITED NATIONS, N.Y. (NEA) — President Nixon seems to have impressed Moscow with his warning that the United States will sell more Phantom jets to Israel if Russian military intervention in the Middle East "continues to escalate."

Since his bold decision on Cambodia, the Soviet leaders have apparently concluded that the sound and fury of some congressional and student criticism is not decisive in the conduct of American foreign policy.

They are beginning to realize that their aggressive policy in the Middle East and the Mediterranean—an area of strategic importance to NATO—will not go unchallenged.

In the view of some East European diplomats, this accounts for Moscow's new interest in the stalled four-power efforts to seek a negotiated settlement of the Arab-Israeli conflict.

The propaganda war will continue, of course. The Russians are not likely to tone down their attacks on Nixon since abuse of "capitalists" is a traditional Marxist-Leninist weapon.

But despite Nixon's decision to smash Communist bases in Cambodia, Moscow did not break off the Vienna talks on the limitation of strategic weapons (SALT)—as some Cassandras in the U.S. Senate predicted.

Nor did the Russians rush to the aid of Cambodia's Prince Sihanouk who is now regarded by the Kremlin as a puppet of Red China. They became, instead, slightly more flexible in the Middle East.

To retain their hold on Egypt, the Russians must, of course, support Arab demands for Israel's total surrender. But privately Soviet diplomats are hinting they might reconsider their rejection of the "Rhodes Formula" which was originally proposed by the United States.

Because Egypt's President Nasser insists that the Arabs will not negotiate directly with Israel, this formula involves the deliberate ambiguity whether the two sides are in direct diplomatic contact.

At the Rhodes negotiations in 1948-49, Israelis sat in one hotel room and the Arabs in another, with a U.N. mediator moving between them. Israel insisted this constituted "direct negotiations."

Whatever the formula, Israel has injected some new blood in the deadlocked diplomatic talks on the Middle East. For one thing, Premier Golda Meir made it clear that the Israeli David will not hesitate, if necessary, to resist aggression by Russia. Israeli airmen, she warned, will challenge Soviet pilots flying over Israel or the occupied territories.

Since the Russian airmen have never been tested in actual combat, this is a challenge the Kremlin is not likely to risk.

Moreover, a Soviet-Israeli confrontation could precipitate a great-power confrontation which the Red Army's marshals do not want—certainly as long as they have their hands full with the Red Chinese.

Even more significant was the statement by Foreign Minister Abba Eban that Israel might make concessions that would be "startling" in quest for peace.

Diplomats interpreted this unprecedented declaration as a strong hint that the Israelis will relinquish most of the territory they conquered in the 1967 six-day war and probably share with the Arabs the administration of the old city of Jerusalem.

In return, Israel wants a negotiated settlement with a guarantee of secure and recognized boundaries, free navigation through international waterways and a binding Arab peace pledge. Such a settlement would inevitably open the way to a solution of the Palestinian refugee problem.

Do the Russians have enough influence to bring their Arab clients to the peace table? This is a question U.S. diplomats are exploring.

North's raise to two no-trump was doubtful. He did have a workable five-card club suit, but three of his seven high-card points were represented by jacks. Maybe his three nines were what encouraged him to bid.

South had no problem about going on to game. His 17 high-card points were gilded. West opened the queen of spades. The suit was continued and South had to win the third lead.

He continued with a low club and against normal defense would have probably gone down two tricks. He would let East win the first club with his queen. East would shift to a heart and South would try the heart finesse and wind up losing four spades, one heart and one club. We say probably, because South might have gone up with the ace of hearts and settled for a sure down one.

Things didn't go quite that way. West was some sort of expert and when South led that low club West started to think. His thoughts went something like this. "Either South or my partner holds the queen of clubs. If South holds it he is going to finesse and my king is doomed. Suppose East holds that queen of clubs plus two small ones. If I play low South will put in dummy's jack. My partner will take his queen and later on South will be able to run the rest of the club suit. On the other hand if I play the king, South will have to take his ace right away and the club suit will be dead."

After all that thought, West produced the king of clubs. The ace was played from dummy and when East dropped the queen, South had five club tricks and the rubber.

West had thought long, hard and very unfortunately.

Letter to the Editor

B. M. BELL, Jr., Sedalia, and C. M. HART, Route 1, Sedalia — It's rather amusing to the husbands of two 1970 Sedalia census enumerators to observe the hullabaloo that is now taking place. What makes it amusing is that many Sedalians refused to cooperate with the enumerators and give the accurateness you are now clamoring for.

Any of the Sedalia 1970 enumerators will verify the following: (1) During the initial attempt at collecting the forms mailed to each addressee, less than 50 per cent of the residents were available. Those who were, gave numerous reasons why they couldn't be bothered with providing the much needed information. Many didn't have their forms filled out. Others misplaced or lost theirs. And some even tried to evade the enumerators. (2) Call backs, frequently three, four, five, six, and even seven times to some of the more difficult residences were the rule for all enumerators. Consequently, since the census is effective as of the 1st day of April 1970 people moved away before the enumerators could get to them, while others moved in from outside the city and stated that they had been counted elsewhere. (3) Some neighbors were helpful by giving the names of people who were not at home (away on vacation or temporarily out of town) while others wouldn't even give the enumerator the time of day, let alone their neighbor's name. (4) For those who couldn't be contacted during the day, or early evening, notes were left asking them to please call the enumerator's home so that an appointment could be arranged. Many even ignored the note.

If you really want to place the blame, don't place it on the U.S. Census Bureau and its enumerators. Place it where it belongs...on many local citizens who either have very guilty consciences because of their trying to hide something or don't want to get involved.

In your 19 May editorial the recommendation concerning the use of Girl Scouts to take the 1980 census has a lot of merit. At least then the people disagreeing with the count can say, "It's very inaccurate because they used inexperienced, unpaid kids who didn't know better. And since we're the trained experts we'll decide on what's an accurate figure."

Chymopapain Injection Replacing Disk Removal

By WAYNE G. BRANDSTADT, M.D.

Q—I have a herniated disk that is causing nerve damage. Can it be arrested? I wear a brace and am not allowed to lift anything heavy. My doctor says an operation may help but that I will always have back trouble. What do you think?

A — In certain cases, a ruptured disk, also called a slipped disk or herniated nucleus pulposus, can be cured by injecting it with chymopapain, a digestive enzyme derived from papaya. This treatment is replacing operative removal of the affected disk in many cases.

Q—I am a man who has always been stooped-shouldered but lately it is getting worse. Is this hereditary? Could it be the cause of my backache? Is there any cure for it?

A—This type of spinal curvature may be caused by weakened back muscles or such diseases as muscular dystrophy, osteitis deformans (Paget's disease) or ankylosing spondylitis (Marie-Strumpell's disease). It is not hereditary. It may be associated with backache. The treatment would depend on the cause.

Q—Is there any effective treatment for scoliosis?

A—For the treatment of this S-shaped curvature of the spine to be effective, it should be discovered early, usually in childhood, and promptly treated by the application of a body cast or corrective brace.

Q—What is spondylitis of a vertebral segment? Will it get worse in time?

A—This is a chronic rheumatoid or tubercular arthritis of the spine. It usually results in a bent-over posture. As a rule, the disease is progressive and requires expert management by a team consisting of a rheumatologist, physiotherapist and an orthopedist.

Q—For 10 months I have had a severe pain in my coccyx whenever I get up from a sitting position. It doesn't bother me when I walk or stand. My doctor calls it coccydynia. X rays showed nothing wrong. Could this be cancer? Do you know of any cure?

Coccydynia is pain at the lower end of the spine. In the absence of any X-ray evidence of a tumor, it is not a cancer. Your doctor should try to find and remove the cause. For temporary relief, take aspirin and use a heating pad.

Taxpayers Ask IRS

Q If I pay someone to prepare my return, isn't he responsible for it being accurate?

A) No, you the taxpayer are responsible for the accuracy of income and expenses reported on your return. For this reason, it is advisable to check all the entries on the form before you send it in. Make sure, too, that the form you file has the label with your name, address and Social Security number attached.

Q) If you go overseas to work, do you still have to pay U.S. tax on your income?

A) If you take a job with the U.S. government, your income will be fully taxable. Income from a private concern overseas, however, may be tax free in whole or in part.

Confederacy's Dollars

An appropriate footnote to the current story of the South's rise again in political importance popped up the other day under a Yankee dateline.

Up in New Haven, Conn., Yale University has come into quite a bit of money. Confederate money, and Yale is delighted. Thanks to a gift of some 9,000 notes and other once-negotiable C.S.A. paper, Yale now has one of the largest and most valuable collections of Confederate currency in the world, worth something like $100,000 on today's booming collector's market.

You don't have to look far for the ironic point. What with the dollar continuing to lose its battle with inflation, saving Confederate money turns out to have been a good idea after all.

Looking Backward

Ninety-five Years Ago

One case of spinal meningitis in the city. Improving as we learn... The Methodist church netted the sum of $32.75 by the spelling bee and ice cream social... General George R. Smith was able to be out in his buggy on yesterday. Nothing the matter with him, only a slight touch of the gout from overliving.

Forty Years Ago

Peter B. Stratton, formerly editor of the Sedalia Democrat, who for several years has been residing at Berryville, Ark., is moving to Pettis county and will reside on a farm near Houstonia.

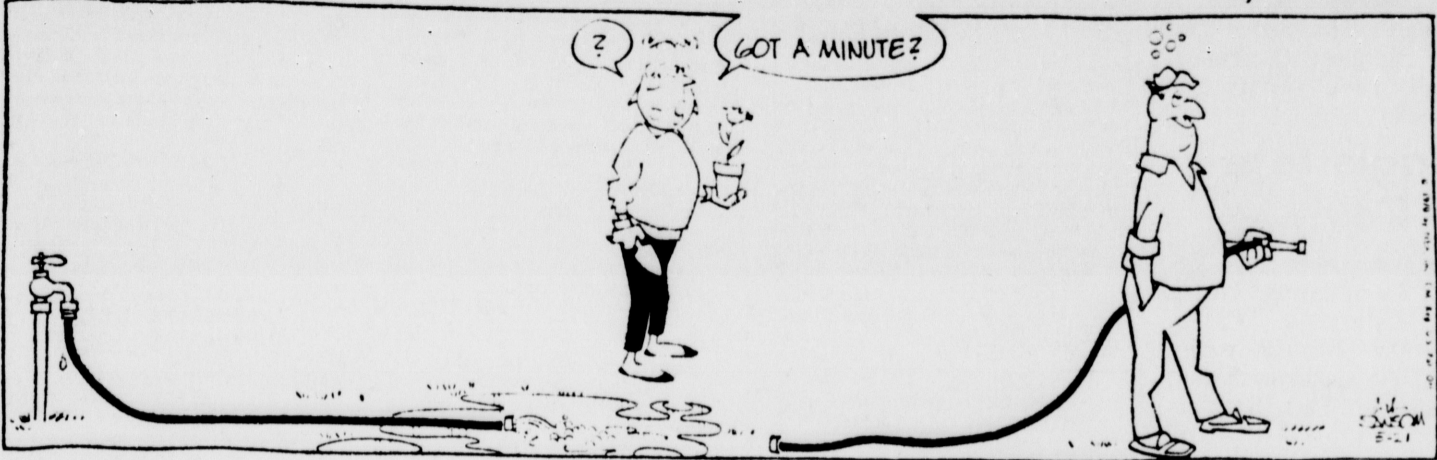

Sedalia is to have a genuine Tom Thumb miniature golf course located in Liberty Park just to the right of the east entrance on the triangular plot between the drive, Park avenue and the lake. It will be an 18-hole course. It is being financed locally by R. F. "Dick" Boehme and W. P. "Fit" Stanley. Members of the park board who negotiated the lease are: L. F. Ritchie, C. F. Hartenbach and George H. Trader.

POLLY'S POINTERS

Make a Nice Bathrobe Of Three Bath Towels

By POLLY CRAMER

DEAR POLLY—Mrs. E. L. K. could use the following directions for making a towel robe with ribbon ties. Three large matching bath towels are needed, an open-end neck zipper 22 or 24 inches long, about two yards of wide ribbon to match the towels and matching thread.

Fold one towel in half lengthwise and cut the neck opening in the center. Run basting stitches along one end of each of the other two towels. Pull stitches up to make gathers to fit front and back yoke measurements on first towel and sew to it. Leave ends for sleeves. If towels are fringed this will leave fringe at the bottom of the robe and across the ends of the sleeves. Sew underarm seams and side seams to within 6 or 8 inches of the bottom. Cut opening in the back from center of neck to the length of the zipper. Insert zipper according to directions. Bind neck opening with ribbon. Sew an end of the remaining ribbon to each of the side seams so it comes over the seam where the yoke and bottom were attached. Tie in a bow in front. Good luck, Mrs. E. L. K.—FLORENCE

DEAR POLLY—Mrs. J. B. C. wanted to know how to make a towel coat sweater. Mine is made of three towels at least 25 inches wide. I use a blouse or dress pattern and cut the back from one towel, making darts at the shoulder. Cut so the fringe is on the bottom. Take second towel for one sleeve and one side of the front. The third towel will make the other sleeve and the other side of the front. Be sure to cut so the fronts have fringe on the bottom, too. The part left from cutting out the sleeves can be pieced in the back to make a square, sailor-type collar which lays nice and flat. Use small scraps to make patch pockets for each side of the front. Sew together as you would a blouse or jacket. This style made with three towels allows for long sleeves whereas using two the sleeves will not be longer than elbow length.—LORETTA

DEAR POLLY—We no longer use our large standing bird cage and I hate to discard it. Can someone suggest some use for it or something we could make out of it?—HELEN

The International Association of Machinists at a meeting Wednesday night appointed committees to work inside the Parkhurst Manufacturing plant to streamline unionization efforts there.

John Haines, business representative for district 71 of the I.A.M., said the move was part of the basic procedure used in unionization of a large plant. He reported that the Parkhurst employees involved would primarily work at increasing the return of union authorization cards.

Company President William R. Parkhurst released a statement Thursday concerning this newest development.

The International Association of Machinists has been attempting, without success, to unionize our plants for over one year. It appears that every effort on their part has been met with resistance by the majority of our employees," he said.

The management of Parkhurst and the employees of Parkhurst have been able to accomplish a great deal by working together without outside interference. We will continue to work together for our mutual benefit in the future and from all evidence it appears that we will do so without a union.

Haines said response inside the plant was "pretty good" but claimed it was hard to keep an accurate count of valid union authorization cards, "because of the large change-over at Parkhurst."

It is hoped, said Fairfax, that western Missouri counties may be able to hook up to the system in the near future.

Education Evaluators Anticipated

Officials from State Department of Education will be in Sedalia Monday to evaluate the Sedalia's public school system, according to Dr. T. J. Norris, Superintendent of the Board of Education.

The Sedalia school system's triple "A" rating may hang in the balance as a result of the findings, according to the criteria required for such a rating.

Norris said he had no idea what the findings would be, however he knew the requirement of a kindergarten system and the present overcrowding of classrooms and the present overloads on teachers will go against Sedalia.

If Sedalia's triple "A" rating is cancelled by the state, the only way to regain it would be to correct the faults found by the department officials, Norris said.

Hopefully, he added, the new junior high school, approved by voters on March 24, will be completed by the fall of 1971. This would alleviate the major problems now apparent in the school system which may cause the loss of the AAA rating.

The new school will ease the overcrowding of Smith-Cotton High School and enable the establishment of a kindergarten system in Sedalia, Norris said.

Man Attempts To Lure Youth To His Truck

Robert Kinner, 8, 703 West Seventh, told Sedalia Police Wednesday that a man in a late model blue pickup truck stopped him about 4:45 p.m. in the 600 block of South Ohio and told him to get into the truck.

Kinner told police when he refused the man threw a dollar bill at him and then pointed a gun at him. The boy told police he picked up the money and went home.

Mrs. Kinner took her son to the police station and reported the incident after she learned what had happened. The youth could not identify the man.

Police Chief William Miller Thursday again urged parents to warn their children to beware of any such offers from strangers and to report any such incidents as soon as possible.

Now that the closing of schools for the summer is drawing near, Miller said, motorists should look for possible traffic accidents involving children who will be more commonly seen playing along, if not in, the city streets.

Dr. Spock is 'Idealist' Revealed in New Book

HOLLYWOOD — (NEA) — The limousine was snaking its way through beautiful Coldwater Canyon as the long fingers of the doctor probed the ribbon on the gaily wrapped gift.

"I love presents," he said, with all the joy of a 6-year-old on Christmas morning. "They gave me this and $500 for the Civil Liberties Defense Fund." Dr. Benjamin Spock added, of his just-taped appearance on Life With Linkletter, seen on NBC-TV on May 15.

The ribbon and paper were now off, crumpled into a neat ball of color. "It's a cordless electric calendar clock," he said, reading the carton. He removed a sleekly designed affair. "Isn't it handsome? It really makes me feel I'm in the Space Age."

Dr. Spock, one of the most controversial figures around and now arrested twice in protest movements, is surprisingly tall when you meet him. "Everyone tells me that. Maybe I write like a short, round man," he smiles.

Why did he agree to appear on this new Linkletter show, in which Art and his son Jack delve into hotter issues than the old House Party days? "Well, I was in California on speaking engagements and I went on the show in connection with my book for adults, 'Decent and Indecent,' which is about man's predicament."

He outlined some of the beliefs which he expresses in the book, many of them surprisingly conservative: "If man is going to begin making heaven on earth, he had better become wiser about himself. Man has lost his idealism. He has lost sight of the fact that he is a spiritual being. He thinks, since he has learned of evaluation, it shows he is just an animal. If that is so, man says, then he begins to behave worse than animals."

Dr. Benjamin Spock and Art Linkletter

Dr. Spock says some of the reviewers have called his ideas those of a 19th-century man. "I think they are 21st-century ideas," he argues. "To use an example that is not popular, 'Oh, Calcutta' is not emancipation, it's not sophistication. It's only saying, 'Aha, we're animals.' But animals don't behave that way. Man will destroy himself and his world if he has no ideals."

The man who has raised more babies than all the nurseries in the world has become a hero to the restless youth. "I only got to be their friend by being indicted and convicted by the federal government."

He says the statement, which he signed along with many other members of the academic community and which led to his arrest, "only said we stood morally with those young men who refused to participate in a war that is a crime against humanity."

Art Linkletter, his host, is a Republican fund-raiser, supporter of President Nixon, and conservative. Linkletter said, "He and I don't disagree on many things. There are, however, chapters in his book with which I do disagree 100 per cent."

Linkletter feels both sides must be presented on his show, although he says in some cases "I make no bones about the fact that I am going to be against a guest."

Art is happy that the character of show business has changed: "We all used to be neuter, emasculated, second-class citizens. Now there has been a whole change and we are allowed to have opinions."

And guests who have them, too.

Andy Griffith, who starred in his own television series for eight years, will return in a new, weekly half-hour situation comedy series planned for the 1970-71 season.
